The President's Radio Voice.

Not Too Big, Says Mussolini.

Lindbergh Sits Down.

Beer, But Too Dear.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MIAMI, May 9.

MILLIONS THAT heard President Roosevelt talking to the country Sunday night will congratulate him on the possession of a "perfect radio voice," every word distinct, every idea clear, a voice carrying conviction. The radio, putting the President in direct touch with those that elected him, is a President's greatest asset, and defense.

MUSSOLINI, accused of drifting toward "Socialism" because he plans control and possible ownership of great industries, says it is not Socialism, but business can get too big for individual ownership.

The cobbler making two or three pairs of shoes in a week is a craftsman entitled to own his business.

The head of a great shoe, steel or other manufacturing company, employing tens of thousands of men, dealing in hundreds of millions of dollars, may be engaged in a business too big for any individual or corporation ownership or control. Mussolini asks, concerning such a concern:

"How is it possible to think that its fortunes or misfortunes are the personal affair of the manager of that house, or of the shareholders of that industry?

"No, it now interests the whole of the nation, and the political, judicial and moral expression of the nation cannot be a stranger to it."

YOU MAY find this country, which has recently thrown over many old-fashioned ideas, drifting in the direction of government control of "things that grow too big."

The late William J. Bryan wanted to forbid any industrial corporation to do more than one quarter of all the business in its field. Nothing came of that.

"IT IS BETTER to sit down than to go through them," says Col. Lindbergh of sand storms in the southwest that sometimes blast the paint from automobiles, and reach up high enough to attack airplanes.

Flying over the Texas Panhandle, Col. Lindbergh was forced down by such a storm last Saturday. Instead of "bucking it," as a less experienced flier might have done, he "sat down" until the storm passed. Then he took off from his landing place, flew into Kansas City and on East.

What has been called "Lindbergh's marvellous luck" is Col. Lindbergh's flying "common sense," added to great skill.

Mr. Kettering, chief engineer of General Motors, who has flown many hours "blind," has said:

"If men would fly only when birds fly there would be fewer accidents. Birds do not fly at night, in rain, fog, or sandstorms."

BEER ARRIVED in Miami yesterday with the temperature at 85, and was welcome. The Miami Herald carried fourteen large display advertisements of brewers and beer sellers. The price started at fifty cents a small bottle, a near-bootleg price, but that will pass.

What temperance requires is that workmen should be able to get as they used to do, a glass of beer properly made for five cents. Big, established brewers who understand manufacture and distribution will bring that about, unless taxation is made prohibitive.

TWENTY THOUSAND citizens visited the seven American submarines in Miami Harbor Sunday. Those deadly fighting machines that strike unseen, backed by airplanes that fight above the clouds, are the best possible protection for 123,000,000 in the United States.

When you realize that one inexpensive submarine can destroy, with safety to itself, a $50,000,000 battleship, and that fewer than 50 men can operate a submarine, as against thousands on a battleship, you realize the part that submarines will play in the next war.

You realize also the part that the airplane will play, manned by two men, costing a tenth of one per cent as much as a battleship, and as deadly to that ship as an eagle to a rabbit.

IF REAL ESTATE values kept up with tax assessors and collectors, much prosperity would result. The Miami Herald yesterday published twenty-four pages, eight columns to the page, advertising for sale more than forty thousand pieces of real estate on which taxes have not been paid.

Nearly all the owners are marked "unknown." Many that now let property go for taxes will tell their children later:

"I might have been rich."

Others will save money by relinquishing over-taxed properties.

HITLER TELLS 30,000 followers that since Germany lost the war because Germans went on strike, he calls them "the traitors of 1918." He says he now has 600,000 men enrolled in his Nazi troops "as an iron guard of the revolution."

Hitler also says that there are now eight million Germans unemployed.

Unless he can change that situation the 8,000,000 idle may be transformed into an "iron guard" for another kind of revolution.

COL. TURNER, on the staff of Gov. Rolph, of California, once invited this writer to fly from Los Angeles to New York, saying:

"I will make the trip with you in less than 11 hours."

It was a great temptation, but various reasons made it seem wiser to come more slowly.

900 PUPILS PERILED BY STORM

Gale Sweeps Through Ohio, Leaving Trail Of Wreckage

DAYTON, O., May 9.—(AP.)—A severe wind storm which struck Dayton early today, attaining a velocity estimated at from 35 to 70 miles an hour, caused damage to residential and industrial structures approximated at between $500,000 and $750,000. Ten persons were injured, none seriously.

In a second thunder storm lightning caused a near-panic among 900 pupils in the Lincoln School, when the brick chimney on the building was demolished, crashing through the roof into the cafeteria. Children in the classrooms were prevented from dashing from the rooms by their teachers. After the debris had settled, all children were marched safely from the school. No one was injured.

The storm struck Southwestern Ohio from southern Darke County to the Kentucky line, and east to Columbus.

High winds seemed to concentrate on a line from the west through Eaton, Dayton, Xenia and Washington Court House, but far to each side of that path heavy rains were general.

Reports indicated almost every orchard and building in the territory surrounding New Madison and Castine to be badly damaged.

LINDY GUARDED IN COURT

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(INS.)—Special police guards were detailed to the District Supreme Court today, where Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was called as a witness in the conspiracy trial of Gaston B. Means, former Department of Justice agent, and Norman T. Whitaker.

Whitaker has been identified as "The Fox," one of the members of the kidnap gang as portrayed by Means in his stories that duped the Washington society woman, Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean.

The government charges that Whitaker told Mrs. McLean he had just held the Lindbergh child in his arms, even while its dead body lay in the New Jersey woodside near the Lindbergh estate.

Mrs. McLean, carrying a small bag containing $200,000 worth of gems, was on the stand as the trial resumed today.

The expected visit of the flying Lindberghs at the county airport failed to materialize yesterday. They flew directly to Washington from Columbus.

It was said at the airport that Col. Lindbergh did not route his flight to Pittsburgh because of adverse weather conditions.

3 Billion Work Plan Ready

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP.)—The broad program for reviving business through $3,000,000,000 for public construction and federal co-operation on industrial regulation, was completed today by administration advisers for submission to President Roosevelt.

Senator Wagner (Dem.), of New York, in charge of the drafting, announced it probably would be presented to the White House late today.

Primarily designed to regulate industrial production through what President Roosevelt has described as a "partnership," the legislation would relax the anti-trust laws to permit agreements within industries subject to governmental approval.

Wagner and his associates have added to this industrial control plan a proposal for a $3,000,000,000 construction program by the federal government, states, municipalities and private interests.

About $1,000,000,000 of the total would be provided by the Treasury for federal public works and the remainder would be advanced by the Reconstruction Corporation for construction loans to local government units and private industry.

SHORTER WEEK BILL APPROVED

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP.)—A House labor sub-committee today unanimously approved a shorter work week bill embodying minimum wage and anti-trust law suspension provisions.

The bill, said Chairman Connery, will be reported to the full committee for approval tomorrow.

The principle on which the measure is based, Connery asserted, is that of a licensing system. All manufacturers and importers under the new measure would be required to obtain licenses from the federal government assuring their compliance with the shorter work week and minimum wage provisions.

Instead of permitting manufacturers to work longer than five-day week, six-hour day shifts, the bill will leave that power to a new agency to be known as the Federal Trade Regulation Board.

This board, sitting in conference with industry and labor, will have the right to establish minimum wages, hours of production and other agreements within an industry necessary to carry out a shorter work week plan.

2 Prussian Slayers Executed With Ax

BERLIN, May 9.—(INS.)—Ernst Reins, slayer of a postoffice official, and Johannes Kabelitz, who killed a chauffeur, were executed by the ax today after Premier Hermann Goering, of Prussia, refused them pardons.

The executions were publicly announced in posters throughout the nation.

1,700 Los Angeles Teachers Dismissed

LOS ANGELES, May 9.—(AP.)—A total of 1,700 probationary, substitute and night school teachers have been ordered dismissed by the Los Angeles Board of Education for economic reasons.

PAYROLLS AND WORK INCREASE

Pittsburgh Indices Show Definite Improvement

Developments in the economic situation today:

1—Pittsburgh district industries reported a definite, if limited pickup.

2—First favorable distinct employment report in three years announced.

3—Thousands of workers throughout the nation received pay increases as a result of President Roosevelt's suggestion.

4—Henry Ford, believing the "turn-around" had come, planned a big advertising campaign. General Motors reported an increase in sales.

Pittsburgh is definitely moving out of the depression, with all vital indices pointing to increased work, pay and purchasing power and a new feeling of confidence, business leaders say.

As banks reported appreciable payroll increases for the district's major industries, substantiated by the Pittsburgh District Federal Reserve Bank, H. F. Bucher, director of the State-Federal Employment Office here, gave out his first "unusually favorable" report for the district in the past three years.

UPWARD TREND

The Union National Bank, Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company and the First National Bank of Pittsburgh all reported an upward trend in industrial payrolls covering the period of the last four weeks. The upward movement is especially marked in the coal industry, they stated.

New jobs secured through his office for the past week are more than double those of the preceding weeks, and the general employment picture covering the past five weeks is "astonishingly" brighter than a year ago, Bucher announced.

Factories and offices are calling men back to work and for the first time since the office was set up, according to Bucher, requests are coming in to cancel applica-

Pittsburgh Woman Dies in World Tour

RIO DE JANEIRO, May 9.—(AP.)—Miss Lee Prather, 67, of Pittsburgh, making a world tour aboard the liner Carinthia, drowned in a bathtub yesterday following a heart attack. The body will be shipped to Pittsburgh.

Attorney Gerald D. Prather, representing the only family of that name listed in this district, said he did not know the Miss Prather reported dead aboard a liner in Rio de Janeiro. She did not book her passage in Pittsburgh.

Kingfish Shielded In Slander Suit

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP.)—Attorneys for Senator Huey P. Long obtained dismissal of the slander suit brought against the Louisianian by Brig. Gen. Samuel T. Ansell, retired, successfully contending that Long was protected by congressional privilege.

RICH MAN DEAD IN MYSTERY

Mystery veiled the shooting to death on the McKees Rocks Bridge early today of Joseph Stepek, 55, reputed wealthy McKees Rocks real estate man and former hotel proprietor.

County detectives and McKees Rocks police were undetermined whether Stepek and been a victim of gangster guns or had died by his own hand.

Stepek's body, a bullet wound in the right temple, was found on the sidewalk of the bridge near the middle of the river span by Patrolman Sol Roth, of McKees Rocks.

His pocketbook and a lodge book lay beside him. The pocketbook was empty. Powder marks were found on his forehead and his right hand. No revolver was discovered. A discharged bullet was found in the rear seat of his automobile, nearby, and the rear window of the car had been shattered.

Police said it was possible he might have fired the shot leaning against the bridge railing and that the gun fell into the Ohio River. Stepek's home was in Pine Hollow road.

Dos Passos Stricken Visiting Hospital

BALTIMORE, May 9.—(INS.)—Double trouble struck at the family of John Dos Passos, New York author today, as he visited Johns Hopkins Hospital to take his wife back to New York.

The author's wife had just recovered from a tonsilitis operation. The author upon arriving at the institution was taken ill with rheumatic fever, and was placed in a sick bed while his wife was being discharged.

First Lady Drives To N. Y. After Trip

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt arrived in New York today, driving her blue roadster, in which she has been making a week's holiday trip.

Father Loses Boy, 3, As Judge Fails to Mend Quarrel

Judge Thomas M. Marshall ordered the child taken from the father, Charles Baltzer, Jr., former Carnegie Tech night school engineering student, and given to the mother, Mrs. Eileen Baltzer, attractive brunette, in habeas corpus proceedings. She was represented by Attorney James Philip O'Connor.

The boy cried at intervals throughout the hearing. A tipstaff took him in his arms and tried to quiet him.

Mrs. Baltzer testified she had lived with her husband's parents at 1549 Spring Garden avenue until April 19 when she was forced to leave. She took her son and went to live with her mother, Mrs. Helen McLaughlin, 121 Morewood avenue. Ten days later Baltzer carried the boy away, she said.

Baltzer testified his wife had not taken proper care of the child. Other testimony revealed she had been working to help support her son. Judge Marshall said:

"There doesn't seem to be much difference between you two. For the sake of your child you should live together."

Neither responded and the judge said he was compelled to award the child to the mother, no evidence having been presented to show she was not worthy to keep the boy.

'Mountie' Chief Dies In Jobless Battle

SASKATOON, Sask., May 9.—(AP.)—Inspector L. J. Sampson, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, commissioned to his high post only a month ago, was fatally hurt and three other police officers were injured late yesterday in a pitched battle with unemployed at a civic relief camp. Twenty-five unemployed were arrested after the fight.

2 FACE COURT IN AID RACKET

Two men—the first to be arrested in the Better Business Bureau's crusade against charity racketeers—received hearings in Police Court today, while the bureau pressed its investigation of the "Forty Thieves," alleged plunderers of bankrupt merchants.

L. J. McCarthy and John Stahlman were held for a further hearing, charged with violating a city ordinance. They are accused of soliciting for an alleged charity without a license, and Magistrate Leo Rothenberg ordered an information charging false pretense made.

It was testified the men had permission to solicit for a street guide, but instead had sought contributions to the Baldwin Township police fund by using the name of Police Chief John Erbel.

About $400 in checks was turned over to the fund, but no cash was reported, it was declared. The township will return the checks to the contributors, William E. Arm-

BOLT QUARRY HIDEOUT IN STOLEN CAR

One Fugitive Thought Wounded in Wild Pursuit

The Maug mob killers dashed from cover in an abandoned New Homestead stone quarry under fire of police and detectives early today to find refuge in the city.

Detectives believe one of them was wounded.

Daring the bullets of their pursuers, the pair—John Maug and Edward Turpack, convicted slayers and Western Penitentiary fugitives—drove their stolen automobile at the machine of pursuing county detectives, careened against a tree that saved them from a plunge over a precipice, and got away.

ABANDON AUTO

Police and detectives scoured the district between Tweny-fifth street, South Side, and McKees Rocks to no avail.

There was no blood in the abandoned automobile, but detectives said one of the men slumped in his seat, and that while two bullets pierced the rear of the car, only one passed out the front. They said it was likely the other bullet lodged in one of the killers.

The desperadoes' sally from cover in the quarry took county detectives and West Homestead police by surprise, so complete they had only time to fire at random at the fleeing automobile.

HOUSES SEARCHED

The detectives were searching houses in the vicinity of the home of Mrs. Edward Turpack, Forest avenue, West Homestead, on a tip that the fugitives were hiding there.

Accompanied by Police Chief David Lindberg, of West Homestead, Patrolman Harold Russell and Special Officer Joseph Lichenstein, of the Mesta Machine Company, they were nearing the quarry when a blue Buick sedan roared toward them in the darkness of early morning.

In its mad plunge down the curving road, the machine swerved to the edge of the hillside, strik-

Col. Stanton Dies; Said 'Lafayette, We Are Here'

SAN FRANCISCO, May 9.—A heart ailment has ended the life of the Army officer who uttered the ringing war-time phrase:

"Lafayette, we are here."

Col. Charles E. Stanton, 74, whose declaration was made July 4, 1917, in Paris before the tomb of the Frenchman who aided the American colonies in the Revolutionary War, died last night. He was stricken ill less than a week ago.

The phrase, epitomizing the arrival of the first American troops to join the Allies in the World War, fired the French audience with characteristic enthusiasm.

At first popularly attributed to Gen. John J. Pershing, who was present at the ceremony, the phrase soon resounded throughout France and the United States.

Col. Stanton, a nephew of Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War in President Lincoln's cabinet, was born in Illinois November 26, 1859. He moved with his family to Utah and later to California.

In 1898 he entered the Army. He was chief disbursing officer of the United States Army in France during the World War. He was retired in 1920.

'Short' Beer Bottlers Facing Seizure Here

Pittsburgh's beer drinking became involved in arithmetic today as John J. McParland, inspector of weights and measures, ordered his men to confiscate all beer bottles bearing conflicting labels of contents ranging from 11 fluid ounces to 16 fluid ounces.

Simultaneously the Pittsburgh Brewing Company announced a 20-cent increase per case, the new cost being $2 net. The raise was attributed to increased cost of raw materials and higher taxes and wages. The price change is effective tomorrow.

Literally thousands of beer bottles are labeled 12 fluid ounces, with "11 fluid ounces" blown into the glass of the bottle, and bearing a revenue stamp marked "one pint," which is 16 fluid ounces, according to McParland. He is going to find out just how many ounces of beer are in those bottle, he declared today. He doesn't know yet whether he can force the breweries to put 16 ounces into the bottles, but the matter has been referred to the city solicitor, he said.

And it makes a difference to the brewer how many ounces make a pint of beer, McParland explained:

"One barrel of beer equals 252 16-ounce pints. While the same barrel will fill 336 12-ounce pints."

DEBT PARLEY TO BE HELD DURING TRADE CONFERENCE

TWO SESSIONS SLATED FOR LONDON

MacDonald Reveals Britain Will Accept Tariff Truce

By HARRY K. REYNOLDS,
International News Service

LONDON, May 9.—Foreign debt negotiations will take place concurrently with the world economic conference, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald told the House of Commons today.

The Premier reiterated, however, that the debt question would not come before the conference itself.

MacDonald told the House "another body of men" will negotiate the debts while the economic parley is in progress. He insisted he and President Roosevelt were in agreement that the economic conference could not be a success unless the debt problem is settled.

MacDonald indicated that British agreement to the international tariff truce proposed by the United States was imminent.

SEES AGREEMENT

Referring to the recent conversations between Norman H. Davis, special American ambassador, and Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, regarding British acceptance of the truce, MacDonald said:

"Subject to settlement of actual words and while protecting the essential position of both governments, there is every prospect of reaching an agreement as to the advisability of an immediate tariff truce."

MacDonald characterized June 15, when Britain and France are due to make another debt payment to the United States, as "an awkward hurdle."

MacDonald also announced that the United States had agreed to participate in international consultation if a satisfactory disarmament agreement is reached by European nations.

ROOSEVELT MUM

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(INS.)—Considerable mystery today enveloped President Roosevelt's policy in the foreign debt issue.

Some administration spokesmen on Capitol Hill declared the President will ask Congress within a fortnight to grant him authority to extend the moratorium and to deal with the problem in his own way during the forthcoming recess of Congress.

Others were equally positive that Mr. Roosevelt is not going to do any such thing. Speaker Henry T. Rainey, for one, asserted it was his opinion that the President would not ask Congress for any special grant of powers where the debts are concerned.

Mr. Roosevelt himself maintained a sphinx-like silence.

PARIS CITES 'PLAN'

PARIS, May 9.—(INS.)—A new version of the reported lump-sum foreign debt settlement plan was published by the newspaper Le Temps, usually regarded as reflecting the views of the Foreign Office.

Notwithstanding official denials from Washington that any such proposal had been made, Le Temps declared it had information that the plan calls for the following:

2—Capital sums loaned on the basis of the new plan to be reimbursed over a period of 50 years.

3—As a guarantee the annuities will be continued, the French government must immediately pay down 25 per cent of her total debt in gold and 5 per cent in silver.

WAY CLEARED FOR BANK BILL

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP.)—Senator Glass (Dem.), Va., announced after a conference today with President Roosevelt that the banking committee would go ahead with the banking reform legislation at this session.

Other members of the committee said Glass went to the White House in response to a telephone call from Secretary Woodin.

Woodin was reported to have asked the sub-committee, which was about ready to report the bill, to hold it up for a few days longer.

INFLATION BILL GAINS IN HOUSE

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP.)—The House rejected the Norris-Simpson cost of production amendment, the only portion of the administration bill in dispute between the Senate and House.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP.)—The House today adopted the conference report on the Farm-Relief-Inflation Bill and began consideration of the "cost of production" amendment, the only portion of the administration bill in dispute between the Senate and House.

Democrats assured quick disposal by the House of the bill by clamping on a rule barring all points of order, by which Republicans had sought delay.

The leaders had called the House into session an hour earlier than usual to expedite action, and the rule which was designed to prevent repetition of yesterday's delaying objections on technical points, was quickly adopted without a record vote.

U. S. RELEASES MEDICAL RUM

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(Universal.) — Virtually unlimited liquor prescriptions are permitted under an order signed by Secretary of the Treasury Woodin and Attorney General Cummings.

The order is effective next Monday. It is based on the recently enacted Celler Act.

No limit is placed on the amount of vinous and spirituous liquors that may be prescribed to a patient, providing his physician decides he needs it, and the quantity named in each prescription is limited to the patient's needs for a 90-day period.

It was pointed out this would allow them to buy it in case lots.

Dr. King Arbitrator At Milk Meeting

CHICAGO, May 9.—(AP.)—Dr. Clyde L. King, of Philadelphia, arbitrator of the Chicago milk industry, presided at a meeting of milk dealers and officers of the Pure Milk Association today called to consider a price increase.

PINCHOT'S WIFE PICKET 3RD DAY

ALLENTOWN, Pa., May 9.—Marching for the third time in the picket lines of the "baby strikers" of Lehigh Valley, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania, yesterday broadcast an appeal to the nation for an aroused public crusade against sweatshops where children work long hours for a wage sometimes as low as 50 cents per week.

Speaking before newsreel cameras, Mrs. Pinchot denounced conditions which permit exploitation of helpless children, as 300 girls and boys on strike from a shirt factory in Northampton cheered her words.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP.)—Representative Connery (Dem.), Massachusetts, chairman of the House Labor Committee, said last night he believes the industry control measure he proposed to introduce would relieve conditions such as the Allentown sweatshop situation.

Representative Walter, of Easton, talked over the Allentown situation with Connery, and quoted the chairman as saying the committee would investigate conditions which led to strikes and picketing by girl workers in the Pennsylvania mills.

LABOR RENEWS PENSION DRIVE

HARRISBURG, May 9.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania Labor Standards Committee yesterday announced inauguration of a drive for enactment of social legislation in Pennsylvania at a possible special session of the Legislature.

Susan M. Kingsbury, of Bryn Mawr College, chairman of the committee, said:

"Pressure must be exerted upon the Governor to include old age pension amendments, minimum wage, the 44-hour week for women and children and other important social legislation on the program of the Pennsylvania Labor Standards Committee in his call for a special session."

300 Army Planes Start Maneuvers

MARCH FIELD, Cal., May 9.—(AP.)—Three hundred United States Army fighting planes were poised at this field today for the start of a three-weeks' maneuver in which they will seek to repulse an "enemy" fleet, now theoretically off the coast from Los Angeles.

Maneuvers today, tomorrow and Thursday are solely of an organization nature, the battle plans to get under way later.

REED CRITICIZES CURRENCY HEAD

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP.)—Overwhelming approval was given by the Senate yesterday to President Roosevelt's choice for Comptroller of the Currency—J. F. T. O'Connor, of California—a few minutes before Senator Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, voiced belated criticism on the ground the nominee had no banking experience.

Reed said it would take months for O'Connor to learn his job and the nomination was "like appointing a man to be captain of an ocean liner in the middle of a hurricane."

Senator McAdoo (Dem.), of California, in his maiden speech to the Senate, said he regarded O'Connor's lack of banking knowledge as a "virtue." They are former law partners.

GENEVA, May 9.—(INS.)—The World Disarmament Conference became clamped in a seemingly hopeless deadlock today.

Representatives of the "big five" powers represented at the conference met in the private office of Chairman Arthur Henderson to report on his proposal that consideration of the British disarmament plan be continued without votes or the submission of amendments.

ANOTHER BONUS ARMY MOVES ON CAPITAL

Veteran Ranks Divided Under 2 Commands For Second Siege

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP.)—The bonus army, now divided as to leadership, is moving into Washington for its second encampment.

Delegations from the Middle West and South already have arrived and have been taken in hand either by the Veterans' Expeditionary Force or the Bonus Expeditionary Force, Inc.

The V. E. F. said 500 men would leave New York today for Washington. B. E. F. leaders said several hundred of their followers would leave from Baltimore tonight.

The V. E. F. has arranged with the administration for a camp at Fort Hunter, Va., for a week. The B. E. F. says it will tell Congress:

Bonus Army 'Fighters' To Defy Police, They Say

NEW YORK, May 9.—(INS.)—Plans were completed here today for a new and militant bonus army march on Washington, to get under way tomorrow.

Five hundred men are expected to march from New York in the first contingent, and another 500 are expected to follow within a few days. Leaders of the movement described the new "army" as a group of "fighters," and declared this bonus expedition would not be "run out of Washington," as the previous army was expelled.

They disclaimed, however, any intention to use force or violence. A member of the executive committee declared:

"No matter how many police are in front of the White House, we will walk in."

The movement is known as the Veterans' Expeditionary Force.

Answering charges by the American Legion and Veterans Bureau officials that the V. E. F. is being backed by Communists, a member of the V. E. F. executive committee said the bonus marchers have no particular political affiliations.

Plans for the march call for assembly of the marchers in Union Square at 1 a. m. tomorrow.

JAP OFFENSIVE IMPERILS AMERICANS

Invaders Drive Ahead Towards Peiping And Tientsin

International News Service.

PEIPING, May 9.—With Chinese defense troops in full retreat, British and American lives and property were menaced today as Japanese-Manchukuo troops pushed relentlessly toward Peiping and Tientsin.

Preceded by an aerial barrage, the Japanese and Manchukuo troops moved swiftly southward, encountering slight resistence with exception of brief skirmishes along the Peiping-Mukden railway.

Large forces of Japanese and Manchukuo soldiers also pressed along the Mandarin highway, taking up strategic positions as Chinese defenders evacuated the so-called Lwan River triangle.

FOUR CITIES BOMBED

TIENTSIN, May 9.—(AP.)—Chinese dispatches today said that four North China cities had been bombed by Japanese airmen participating in the renewed drive which is expected momentarily to force the Chinese to evacuate Lwanchow.

Lwanchow, the principal city between Tientsin and the north coast, was one of the targets of the bombers. The other places attacked from the air were Changli, Funing and Lulung.

At only one point along the Lwan River were the Chinese putting up strong resistance. This was at Tsinan, northwest of Lwanchow, where the famous Gen. Weng Chao-Yuan, who gave the Japanese the battle of their lives at Shanghai last year, was in command.

His artillery was roaring defiance to the attackers.

U. S. SHIP SAILS

SHANGHAI, May 9.—(AP.)—The United States Navy transport Henderson sailed today for Tangk, 30 miles east of Tientsin, after abandoning its usual call at Chinwangtao because of renewed Sino-Japanese hostilities in that region.

The ship is carrying supplies and replacements for the marine guard at the United States legation in Peiping.

RAIL SALE OPPOSED

NANKING, China, May 9.—(INS.)—The Chinese government objected flatly today to the proposed sale of the Chinese Eastern Railroad to Japan by Soviet Russia.

The foreign office informed the Soviet ambassador that discussion of the proposed sale was impossible, in view of the Chinese ownership of the railway under the Peking and Mukden treaties.

Japan O. K.'s Money Export to America

TOKIO, May 9.—(AP.)—The finance ministry today authorized five leading electric power companies to send to America 40,000,000 yen (currently $9,200,000) to purchase their own dollar bonds held by Americans.

Permission was necessary because of the strict prohibition on the export of capital.

Japan Commissions Aircraft Carrier

TOKIO, May 9.—(AP.)—The Ryujo, the Navy's new aircraft carrier, a ship of 7,600 tons, was ceremoniously commissioned today at the Yokosuka naval base.

I. C. C. EXPERT BACKS RAIL BILL

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP.)—Joseph B. Eastman, Interstate Commerce Commission member, told a Senate committee today that the administration's railroad relief bill "will involve loss of employment to railroad labor," but it was an "unsound conclusion that employment should be preserved by retaining waste and inefficiency."

He has been mentioned as the possible choice for federal coordinator of the roads. He testified:

"Economies in operation and service mean reduction in labor and there is no escape from it."

Eastman outlined a long list of proposed economies for the carriers and asserted in many instances "they will need to reduce their rates."

DEMAND HALT IN FARM SALES

MONTEVIDEO, Minn., May 9.—(AP.)—Expressing determination not to pay interest, debts or taxes "until the dollar is made to serve as an honest measure of value," members of the Minnesota Farmers' Holiday Association today adopted a resolution demanding a national moratorium on foreclosures on farms, city homes and personal property.

The organization, which yesterday voted to join in a farm strike starting Saturday, demanded in another resolution that the federal government take over the entire banking and credit system as a public utility "to be operated for the benefit and protection of all the people."

"The Constitution has been debauched, our traditional liberties have been nullified and the rights of men have been subordinated to the rule of financial racketeers."

DES MOINES, May 9.—(AP.)—The Adjutant General's office announced today the withdrawal of three companies of the Iowa National Guard from Denison, where troops have been stationed for two weeks to prevent farm sale riots.

U. S. STUDENTS HURT IN NAZIS' RAID ON JEWS

Firemen Rescue Many Barricaded in College

VIENNA, May 9.—(AP.)—Nine American students filed protests at the American consulate today, saying they had been struck by Nazis in anti-Jewish rioting.

The complainants were listed as Isador Goodman, Henry Zanes, Nathan Shapiro, David Weinstock, Harry Diener, Harold Reilert, Maxwell Silbermann, Eli Starr and Leonard Perlmutter.

The disorders started at the Vienna Anatomical Institute, where a dozen persons were injured, and later involved the university.

At the institute Jewish students, barricaded in upper stories, were rescued by firemen who placed ladders at the windows. Meanwhile police stood off Nazi students.

The disorders spread to the university where noon hour crowds shouted "Down with the government!" and "Heil Hitler!" The university demonstrators fought with the police.

THEATERS EXEMPT

BERLIN, May 9.—(AP.)—Dr. Joseph Goebbels, Nazi minister of public enlightenment, believes the theater is one field in which the Hitler government need not take measures to oust the Jews. He predicts the public gradually will force them out.

Further restrictions on Jews were imposed today in revised Civil Service regulations.

Jews maintaining offices because of war service must now show they underwent fire in the war and those who were ever identified with Communists or the Republican War Veterans Association are barred. This applies to such posts of judges, professors, notaries and police.

Liebermann, a Jew, had been a member of the academy 30 years and president for 12.

LINKS KING, JEWS

LONDON, May 9.—(INS.)—As part of its campaign against alleged Jewish persecution in Germany, the London Daily Herald today charged the new German anti-Semitic weekly Aryan Gazette has "insulted" King George by stating he is of Jewish descent. The Herald quoted the Aryan Gazette as follows:

"Jewry has appreciated how it may force its way into the British nobility and the British government.

"Old Queen Victoria, grandmother of George V, kept ancient records which were especially sacred to her. They showed the daughter of Zedekiah to be the wife of an Irish king. Thence descent passes through the Scottish Kings Kenneth and McAlpine to King James I, of England, and down to Edward VII and George V."

AX MAY HIT PENNINGTON

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP.)—Rumors of a shakeup in the Philadelphia office of the Prohibition Bureau and the removal of Commander John Pennington as administration of the Third District again are current in political circles.

Pennington recently charged three prominent New Jersey Republicans with seeking to have him ousted, naming Senator Kean, former Senator David Baird, of Camden, and Walter Edge, former Ambassador to France.

The administrator is under civil service, and he probably would be only transferred, should the shakeup materialize.

Representatives from Pennsylvania and New Jersey, who declined to be quoted, said the change has been considered by A. V. Dalrymple, head of the prohibition unit, and that he agreed to Pennington's transfer.

Nazi 'Air Raid' Alarms Vienna

VIENNA, May 9.—(AP.)—The Socialist and pro-government press was aroused today over a threatened "air invasion" on Saturday by prominent Nazis from Berlin.

The expected visitors, one of whom is Hans Kerrl, Prussian Minister of Justice, are scheduled to speak on the co-ordination of the German and Austrian legal codes, but the semi-official Reichspost declares they are coming as Nazi agitators and warns them that they are not welcome.

Coast Guard Stands By In Treasure Hunt Feud

NORFOLK, Va., May 9.—(AP.)—The Coast Guard cutter Davis, summoned yesterday by both rival factions seeking to salvage the treasure of the sunken Ward Line steamer Merida, was standing by today to prevent an open clash between expeditions headed by Capt. H. L. Bowdoin and Capt. John Hall.

The cutter, steaming full speed after Capt. Bowdoin, aboard the tug Salvor, and Capt. Hall, aboard the trawler Theresa and Dan, each had called for assistance, arrived at the scene of salvage operations 60 miles off the Virginia Capes at 9:40 last night.

In his message Capt. Bowdoin, who left Norfolk Sunday morning aboard the Salvor to resume operations begun last summer, stated he was being "threatened by interlopers."

Having trouble over our position, wirelessed Capt. Hall, veteran Gloucester fisherman, in a message sent by the winter quarter lightship.

The Hall expedition has been on the wreck since Tuesday of last week.

The Bowdoin party, due to its salvage operations last summer, has taken the position that the wreck is its property and that other expeditions should be barred from attempting to salvage the reported $6,000,000 treasure that went down with the Merida more than 20 years ago when the ill-fated liner was rammed by the Admiral Farragut.

Books Burned by Nazis Given Library Here

As the works of world-famous Jewish authors feed bonfires throughout Germany tomorrow night by decree of the Hitler government, 160 copies of the outlawed books will be presented to Carnegie Library at a mass meeting of protest in Carnegie Music Hall.

Against a background of about 50 Jewish students in cap and gown on the stage, Pittsburgh's leading educators, who are sponsoring the meeting, will speak. Among them will be Dr. John G. Bowman, chancellor of the University of Pittsburgh; Dr. Thomas H. Baker, president of Carnegie Tech; the Rev. Dr. Callahan, president of Duquesne University, and Dr. Keith Sward, of the Pennsylvania College for Women.

As the meeting ends, the students will deposit the books, including works of Heine, Wassermann, Zweig, Ludwig, Marx and others, with Col. Samuel Harden Church, who will accept them for the library.

RICH VICTIM TRAPS KIDNAPERS BY PERMITTING ABDUCTION

SLEUTHS FREE ILLINOIS MAN, ARREST 2

$40,000 Ransom Asked; Brothers Join Raid On Plotters

FREEPORT, Ill., May 9.—(AP.)—Because their wealthy victim let himself be kidnaped and the Sheriff kept just a step ahead of their plot, two alleged abductors waited in a cell today to be prosecuted for a $40,000 ransom conspiracy.

William Trevillian, vice president of the W. T. Rawleigh Company, walked from his office last evening looking forward to being kidnaped.

He was. Two men seized him, bundled him off to an abandoned farm and tossed him, gagged and bound, into the basement.

BROTHERS AID SHERIFF

But Jack and "Red" Schultz, of La Salle, Ill., formerly under cover men for Sheriff E. J. Welter, of La Salle County, happened to have been in Freeport recently looking for jobs. They fell in with William Stubbe, 27, of Rock Grove, Ill., and La Verne Moore, 21, a mailing room employe at the Rawleigh plant. The Schultz brothers said Moore suggested a bit of easy money by kidnaping Trevillian.

RAID FARM HIDEOUT

As the plot unfolded, they returned to La Salle, informed Sheriff Welter of the conspiracy and the sheriff invoked the aid of intelligence men from Chicago federal offices and also told Trevillian, who agreed to submit to kidnaping and help trap the pair, Stubbe and Moore.

The officers surrounded the farm near Durand soon after the abduction last night and with the aid of the Schultz brothers nabbed the alleged kidnapers.

'TATTLE' SLAYER JURY SELECTED

NEW YORK, May 9.—(INS.)—The jury to try Harry March, 16-year-old boy, charged with first degree murder in connection with the fatal stabbing of William Bender, 12, because he allegedly was a "tattle-tale," was completed at noon today.

All but one of the jurors are fathers and are middle-aged men.

While his mother wept, Harry March, fair haired, blue-eyed and chubby, sat apparently unconcerned as prospective jurors were asked whether they realized "that the only penalty for this crime is death."

As each veniremen was called, Judge Thomas Downs asked:

"Would you convict a boy of 16 of first degree murder?"

March, according to a statement in the hands of the police, admitted killing 12-year-old William Bender with a carving knife he had taken from the Murch kitchen. The Bender boy disappeared on January 31, and almost two weeks later his body bound with rope was found in one of a row of partly completed houses by a building inspector.

MARLENE GETS OLD DIRECTOR

HOLLYWOOD, May 9.—(AP.)—The team of Marlene Deitrich and Joseph Von Sternberg is coming back to the films.

The producer and the German actress he discovered in a Berlin music hall have signed new contracts with Paramount studios calling for two pictures Von Sternberg will direct and in which Miss Dietrich will star. The first is to be filed in October.

The contracts signed, Miss Dietrich announced she would leave soon for Germany, returning to the United States in September.

Miss Dietrich and Von Sternberg had been at odds with the studio since the dissolution of the team last year. The star and the studio could not agree on a picture. She was suspended and sued under her contract. The case was dropped.

Von Sternberg broke with the studio over a film vehicle he said was not suited to Miss Dietrich.

Flier Spans Ocean In Surprise Hop

PERNAMBUCO, Brazil, May 9.—(AP.)—Capt. Stanislaus Karzynske, a Pole, was flying on to Rio de Janeiro today after an unheralded 2,149-mile flight across the South Atlantic from Senegal.

He made the surprise hop yesterd in 17 hours and 50 minutes. Capt. James A. Mollison and the late Bert Hinkler were the only other fliers to cross the South Atlantic alone.

Man, 72; Wife, 63, Assured Divorce

CHICAGO, May 9.—(INS.)—Their contest over the question of alimony settled, John Fred Cramer, 72 and Rebecca, his 63-year-old wife today were assured of a divorce by Judge Joseph Sabath.

"Neither of you is likely to live to be more than 100, you know," the judge counseled in settling the alimony problem. Both charge desertion.

MRS. MARY LESIC, THE MOTHER WHO REFUSED TREATMENT FOR HER BOY BILLY, 3, AMUSING HIM ON HIS 'BRADFORD FRAME' IN ALLEGHENY GENERAL

Mrs. Lesic Now Glad Son Was Taken to Hospital

Some Improvement in Boy's Condition Seen By Doctor

With a smile on her face and a tone of happiness in her voice, Mrs. Mary Lesic said today that she is glad her 3-year-old stricken son was taken from her care and is now being treated by medical science.

At Billy's bedside at the Allegheny General Hospital she said:

"I'm glad that my boy is being cared for by the doctors. I guess that it is better for him."

Billy was taken to the hospital last Wednesday on a court order signed by Judge Benjamin Lencher. Mrs. Lesic was hysterical when her son was taken from her in Juvenile Court.

Dr. G. Walter Zulauf, superintendent of the hospital, in a report to Judge Lencher, said that the child is afflicted with tuberculosis of the spine, and that his general condition is fairly good.

SEES SON DAILY

Mrs. Lesic, who lives at 248 Arlington street, Millvale, goes to the hospital every day to see her boy. She usually takes him a picture book and a toy to play with.

Miss Grace Stoakes, chief probation officer of the Juvenile Court, said:

"We feel that the child is going to be cured in the hospital and we are going to give him every possible advantage we can."

HUNT FUGITIVE IN MOUNTAINS

GREENSBURG, Pa., May 9.—With $10 realized from the sale of a prized violin and a bag of provisions, William Henry, 56, Jones Mills mountaineer, today continued to elude state police. On Sunday he shot his son, Elmer, 18, and beat the boy's mother. He is believed hiding in caves on the heights of Chestnut Ridge.

State troopers reported he sold the violin to a friend in Donegal Township. Henry is armed, and troopers believe he will not be taken without a gun battle. He fired on the officers, they say, when sighted Sunday.

Uncle Tom's Cabin Back to Broadway

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP.)—Hard-boiled Broadway is getting ready to shed sentimental tears. The Players Club has chosen for its annual revival—Uncle Tom's Cabin!

Otis Skinner, Fay Bainter, Gene Lockhart and Ernest Glendenning will be in the cast.

LOVE LETTERS READ IN COURT

PHILADELPHIA, May 9.—(INS.)—More of the burning love notes which wealthy Charles Newbold Welsh wrote to Mrs. Estelle Wolon, attractive Titian-haired Chicago divorcee, were read to the court and jury today as the breach of promise suit brought by Mrs. Wolon continued before Judge Horace Stern.

The letter, dated March 17, 1929, continued:

"When I got your letter on the boat, I just turned over in my bunk and cried my eyes out. It is the most delightful letter one could receive.

"I only wanted you to know that I am thinking of you. Now, dear, one big good-night and a great big kiss. Yours, Charles."

Welsh, son of a wealthy traction magnate and twice married, was attended by a nurse in court today. Mrs. Wolon seemed to gaze wistfully over his head as her attorney slowly read the ardent letter to a packed courtroom.

EVOLUTION ROW IN YOUNGWOOD

GREENSBURG, Pa., May 9.—The Youngwood School Board will decide tomorrow night whether George B. Hein, science teach in the High School, will be given an immediate hearing regarding methods of teaching biology.

Hein asked Dr. Walter H. Darling, president of the board, for an immediate hearing, and Dr. Brown promised to have the matter decided tomorrow night. A rumor says Brown will not be re-elected and the teacher asked for a hearing that he might arrange for another school if not re-employed.

Hein's alleged teachings of evolution in the biology class has created much interest and when the Rev. Dr. Edward Wentstrup, of St. Vincent College, preached on the "Catholic Theory of Evolution" in Holy Cross Church in Youngwood, the church was crowded.

Radio Actor's Divorce Names Meat Heir

LOS ANGELES, May 9.—(INS.)—John S. Daggett, known to radio fans as "Uncle John," today had filed suit to divorce Mrs. Marguerite Daggett and had named Michael J. Cudahy, member of the millionaire meat packing family, as co-respondent.

Daggett charged that his wife and Cudahy held rendezvous in the Daggett home last April 25 and once had attacked him with her fists at a mountain resort. Mrs. Daggett also is a radio entertainer.

Homestead Replaces Police Call System

A contract for a new $7,000 police call system, to replace the one now in use in Homestead, was awarded at a special meeting last night of the Borough Council.

Borough officials said installation of the new system will not only effect a slight monthly saving, but that the system will pay for itself in 10 years.

Maug Killers Escape Bullets in Wild Chase

Fugitive Thought Wounded as Pair Flees

FIRE AT FUGITIVES

Leaping from their own machine, the officers fired a fusillade of shots into the rapidly disappearing auto.

By the time the officers had rallied in pursuit, the killers had distanced them.

County detectives said they were hampered in the chase because their machine was a six-year-old model, while the desperadoes had stolen a faster car.

The pursuit was renewed in the South Side upon discovery of the abandoned car. South Side police were told two men left the machine and ran down the embankment toward the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad tracks.

The killers made their first appearance since escaping from a Baldwin Township farm Friday night when they stole the car of R. W. Jones, of 1026 Milton avenue, shortly before midnight last night.

Characteristic of their boldness, they held Jones up at a traffic light at Forbes and Halket streets, Oakland, with guns at his back and shielding their faces, they entered the machine and forced Jones to drive to Bates street and Second avenue.

STEAL CAR, CASH

Jones was ordered out of the car and $62 taken from him. He recovered the automobile after it was found on the South Side. He identified rogues' gallery pictures of Maug and Turpack as those of the men who held him up.

The unexpected burst of the pair from cover in the stone quarry was credited by county detectives with saving the killers from capture.

Detective Michael McDermott said:

"It was a complete surprise. We were up there searching houses on a tip that Maug and Turpack were in that vicinity, when they made the dash out of the quarry. We were right in pursuit, but owing to the surprise, they had a start on us."

The detectives carried riot guns, rifles, repeating shotguns, revolvers and tear gas bombs. They had time only to use the revolvers.

ONE MAN COLLAPSES

Detective Anthony Ferrara said he was in a good position to see the fugitives, and that one slumped down as though he was hit.

The brush was the first hand-to-hand encounter the police have had in the manhunt that began when Maug and Turpack scaled the walls of the Western Penitentiary with two companions April 27. Their fellow fugitives were recaptured.

Maug was the leader of the notorious Maug mob, several of whose members were convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment for the killing of Constable Vernon (Port) Moses, of Ross Township.

Thousands Fearing Quake Sleep in Open

MEXICO CITY, May 9.—(AP.)—Thousands of persons throughout South Central Mexico slept in the open last night, fearing a repetition of three strong earthquakes felt throughout the area Sunday.

The quakes were felt generally in the states of Jalisco, Mexico, Vera Cruz, Oaxaca and Guerrera. Weak structures were damaged but no lives were reported lost.

De Valera to Visit Rome for Holy Year

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, May 9.—(AP.)—President Eamon de Valera is preparing to attend Holy Year ceremonies in Rome Friday evening, May 19.

He will break the journey by stopping at Paris to assist in centenary celebrations of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul.

CYRIL CLEARED BY KENNETH IN KIDNAPING

Five-Foot Pit Found As Peggy's True Hiding Place

BARNSTABLE, Mass., May 9.—(AP.)—Kenneth Buck, alleged kidnaper of Peggy McMath, today exonerated his brother, Cyril, also under arrest for the crime, of any part in the abduction.

In a sworn statement made at the Barnstable County Jail, where both men are held awaiting a hearing on May 2 Kenneth told Police Chief E. E. Hall, of Harwich, that he alone was to blame and responsible for the crime. Hall said Kenneth declared that he could "implicate no other person."

The announcement of Kenneth's statement was made by Chief Hall after a conference which lasted more than two hours and a half. Present at the conference were Chief Hall, Kenneth and his brother, Lawrence, of Somerville, Sheriff Lauchlan Crocker and William Ellis. Ellis' connection with the caes was not disclosed.

URGED POLICE AID

Meanwhile, Cyril Buck revealed to James F. Kiernan, Wareham lawyer, that on two occasions he tried to induce Neil McMath, father of the kidnaped child, to inform police that he was in touch with the kidnapers. McMath, anxious for the return of his child, refused.

Chief Hall also announced he had discovered the true hiding place at Harwichport in which Margaret (Peggy) McMath was kept by kidnapers before her recovery last week. He said he had found a pit about 5 feet deep 50 feet from the "dungeon" previously pointed out, but under the same rambling vacant house.

HIDEOUT CLUES

A water bottle, a tin cracker case, a jar that had contained cocoa, sandwiches and fruit; a mattress, a quilt and an old sweater were found, he said, after he and Patrolman Robert Whiteley had crawled 30 feet on their hands and knees under the house. The chief said he expected the utensils found might yield fingerprints that would be important as evidence in the case.

No cellar ever had been dug under the house, but, crawling underneath the structure, he said, they came to the pit which he said tallied more closely with the girl's description of the place where she was hidden.

It was lighted by a small window in the foundation of the house, but too high above the bottom of the pit to permit the girl to look out. The place was about 10 feet long and six feet wide.

GIVEN 90 YEARS IN SACK KILLING

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., May 9.—(INS.)—Maurice Meyer, 27, today was found guilty of the sack murder of Miss Rose Gendler, 22, department store clerk, in December 1932, and sentenced to 90 years in prison.

The penalty was fixed by trial without jury before Circuit Court Judge L. E. Telleen.

Meyer had pleaded not guilty, maintaining that the girl's death was brought about when she slipped on some ice in the rear of a cleaning plant in Moline.

High School Art Exhibit to Close

The Sixth National High School Art Exhibit, now on display in the Fine Arts Galleries of Carnegie Institute, closes tomorrow night. The Scholastic, national high school magazine, is sponsoring the exhibit. Plans are under way to display the collection at the Century of Progress Exhibition in Chicago.

GANDHI SICK ON SECOND FAST DAY

Call Doctor to Deluxe Retreat of Champion Of Untouchables

POONA, India, May 9.—(AP.)—The Mahatma Gandhi, whose three weeks' fast is just beginning, showed symptoms of nausea this evening.

A well known Bombay physician was summoned to Poona by Gandhi's friends, who fear that the fast, started Monday in protest against treatment of the lowest classes, may cost him his life.

The Mahatma is endeavoring to survive his three-week fast on a diet of boiled water, salt and soda.

The spiritual leader of millions of Indians is just as certain that he will survive as are physicians that he will die.

GUEST OF WIDOW

The Mahatma is passing the period of the fast in the sumptuous Poona bungalow of a devoted follower, Lady Vittal Das Thackersey, widow of a Bombay merchant. The 63-year-old nationalist was taken there last night from Yeroda Prison.

He was released from the prison, where he was held 16 months for his civil disobedience campaign against the government, a few hours after starting the fast. Gandhi announced his civil disobedience campaign was being abandoned for a month. He insisted this proclamation was voluntary, although abandonment had been the condition long demanded by the government in return for his release.

RESTS IN LUXURY

Gandhi sat today in a pillowed chair on the marble veranda of the Bombay widow's bungalow.

His fast, in his own words, is intended to remove bitterness, purify hearts and make clear that his movement in behalf of India's lowly "untouchables" is wholly moral.

Referring to his civil disobedience campaign, he declared his views are unchanged, but since he had been told his followers would suffer terrible suspense during his fast, he thought it would be better to suspend the campaign.

He declared if the government would suspend its ordinances and release political prisoners unconditionally, an opening would be made for peace. There was no present indication that the government would grant the Mahatma's appeal.

RUTH MARRIES FOURTH TODAY

SANTA MONICA, Cal., May 9.—(INS.)—Ruth Elder, famous aviatrix, planned to marry Arnold A. Gillespie, a Hollywood movie studio art director, today at Yuma, Ariz. It will be her fourth marriage.

The information came in a telegram sent from Indio, Cal., by Gillespie to James Grainger, operator of an airport here where Miss Elder is an aviation instructor.

When the "flying beauty" and Gillespie hopped off from Bakersfield, Cal., yesterday she would neither confirm nor deny that Gillespie was to be her fourth husband.

She had applied for a marriage license Sunday at Bakersfield, but was thwarted by the required three-day notice.

Gillespie in his telegram said he and Miss Elder planned to stay at Indio last night, be married at Yuma today, and return here tonight.

Man, 61, Girl, 23, Held After Raid

Edward C. Castle, 61, of 3233 Gaylord avenue, Dormont, and Babe Lee, 23, of 1503 Fifth avenue, were held for court on a morality charge by Magistrate T. D. Jones in Morals Court today.

Castle testified he was a special investigator employed by the Post-Gazette to investigate vice conditions. Police said a check-up proved this was not correct.

He was arrested early today after police traced a telephone call berating them for not raiding an alleged disorderly house in Fifth avenue.

NATION'S YOUTH ENLISTED IN RACKET WAR

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, May 9.—The Crusaders, a nation-wide organization of 1,250,000 militant Americans, launched today, in co-operation with the Hearst newspapers, an intensive campaign against racketeers and gangsters.

Aroused and alarmed by the destructive grip held on the social and economic systems by the powerful forces of the underworld, the Crusaders announced an immediate drive to enlist the aid of young Americans, as the leaders of the future, in the war on this menace.

Enrolment of many scores of thousands of boys and young men, between the ages of 16 and 21, is the immediate objective. To this end the campaign will reach its first climactic point in a mass meeting to be held in this city, on a date to be announced later.

Dr. Mather Abbott, headmaster of the Lawrenceville School, and Gene Tunney are among those already enlisted as speakers. Others of like prominence will be on the platform.

In announcing the program of the campaign, Fred G. Clark, commander-in-chief of the Crusaders, said:

"This is a voluntary organization. The junior division, now to be created, will be a voluntary unit. It will join with the parent organization in the war to annihilate the gangsters and the racketeers."

The Crusaders have 110 battalions throughout the country. The junior division will be created through these battalions as recruiting centers. It is being organized because many eminent persons, members of the Crusaders, have declared the young men of the nation, who is a few years will be voters and professional and businessmen, must be joined to the forces seeking to compel decency in political and economic life.

What Are You Going To Do About It?

"So far as the federal government can accomplish it, all forms of racketeering must cease."

That declaration by Senator Copeland, of New York, is like a call to arms.

Public enemies are in our midst, extorting money from our business men and fattening upon our workers, kidnaping children for ransom and teaching morons how to become kidnapers, plying nefarious trades with contraband whisky and gin and with smuggled "dope," dynamiting and terrorizing homes, and waging gang battles in our streets with machine guns.

These public enemies must be driven out, and Senator Copeland purposes that the strong arm of the federal government shall help to drive them out.

He proposes—and proposes rightly—that a select committee of Congress shall delve into racketeering in all its phases, and bring forth the suppressed facts in all parts of the country. For racketeering and its attendant crimes of violence ought to be pitilessly exposed.

But the thing is not accomplished yet. Senator Copeland's resolution must be adopted in Congress, and members of Congress are busy men these days.

YOU can help to obtain this necessary investigation, by letting your Senators and your members of the House of Representatives know that you want it made.

So what are you going to do about it?

Are you going to write or telegraph to them today?

2 FACE COURT IN CHARITY RACKET

strong, president of the Township Commissioners, said.

Armstrong said:

"The men showed me a handbook of Mifflin Township they said they had put out. But they certainly had no permission either to use Chief Erbel's name or to ask for money for relief purposes or to promise police protection.

"We don't need relief money in Baldwin Township.

"They were going to give us 33⅓ per cent of gross receipts as an out-and-out business matter—not charity."

G. H. Dennison, of the Better Business Bureau, said:

"These men are merely an example of the charity racketeers who are taking upwards of $1,000,000 from Pittsburgh people every year. None of this money was for charity, but checks and cash for several hundred dollars were raised from sympathetic 'suckers.'"

DRIVE ON 'THIEVES'

Meanwhile the bureau's manager, Capt. Reuel W. Elton, and its merchandise expert, Ray S. Gallagher, intensified their drive on the so-called "Forty Thieves."

Elton said:

"Since the Sunday Sun-Telegraph published the announcement of our investigation of these racketeers, a number of further complaints have been received by Mr. Gallagher and myself.

"The activities apparently have extended over a wide range. If bankrupt merchants who have been victimized by these men will only aid us by giving what information they have, we should be able to produce results."

Buying shoddy articles in small lots, they hold them until they can introduce them at "bankrupt sales" of reputable merchants. Use of quality labels on inferior products is charged.

Honest merchants wishing to bid at these sales are often "muscled" out of the way by agents of the "Thieves," who are said to be backed by millions and to stop at no means of attaining their ends.

Meanwhile, the North Side ministers' fight against vice conditions there continued, with the North Side Ministerial Alliance on record as asking police to clean up the district.

A bomb found before the Second United Presbyterian Church Saturday, whose pastor, the Rev. Dr. Samuel S. Laing, leads the reform right, was accepted as a challenge to the association.

A resolution adopted at the meeting of the association yesterday scored the union of police and politics in Pittsburgh.

PLAYING FOR 'JUNIOR'

BETTY JANE MONROE, 11 . . . . SHE'S ON JUNIOR'S PROGRAM

Miss Betty Jane, 1108 Glenn street, Wilkinsburg, at the Sun-Telegraph-WCAE microphone at which she will play an Hawaiian guitar solo on the Quin Hall program tomorrow afternoon.

PATROL ON AIR TOMORROW

Quin Hall's three comic strip characters, "Junior," "Snuggins" and "Spike," are ready for their second Junior Patrol radio program over Station WCAE. The club proceedings will go on the air tomorrow at 4:45 p. m.

"Spike," the newest member of the radio half-hour, will be played by Mike Takos, 14, of 357 Oakland avenue.

Another big feature of the program will be a Hawaiian guitar solo by Betty Jane Monroe, 11, of 1108 Glenn avenue, Wilkinsburg. She will play one of Stephen Foster's melodies.

The Fulton School Orchestra, composed of 30 Junior Patrol Club members, will play two marches. Miss Maebelle Ferrall is the director.

Miriam Rosenbloom, 10, of 6557 Darlington road, will read a poem called "Mother's Glasses," and her sister, Bess, 7, will read one called "A Pain in My Sawdust." Blanche Giancola, 11, and Verna, 15, both of 333 Smith way, will sing a song entitled "Moonlight and Roses."

Councilman's Son Held in Ohio City

Robert Horstman, only son of Councilman Leo Horstman, of Sharpsburg, is expected to be returned to his home today from Toledo, O. The boy was picked up at a bus station there last night at the request of his father, an Associated Press dispatch stated.

The boy said he was on his way to the Chicago Exposition, and is being held in Toledo until his father arrives to bring him back.

SUSPECTS HELD IN TRUCK THEFT

Two Duquesne men, arrested on suspicious person charges in connection with the stealing of a loaded truck from its driver on the William Penn highway, were ordered held for further investigation today, following a hearing in Central Police Station.

City detectives testified that Harry Soffer, 25, and Louis Essner, 29, purchased $2,200 in household goods stolen from a truck near Berk's Glenn on April 29. They said that William Sauter, driver for the Andrew Nagyan Transfer Company, Penn avenue, was stopped by four men with guns who slugged him and then stole the truck.

Detective Robert Carroll said he believes the prisoners act as "fences." Carroll testified that five trucks with goods valued at $100,000 have been stolen in the Pittsburgh district this year.

BEESON THIEF GETS NEW TERM

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP.)—Fentzy J. F. Vandenbergh de Valdor, 54, who pleaded guilty to the larceny of $13,000 from Miss Katherine K. Beeson, formerly of Pittsburgh and Uniontown, Pa., today received an additional sentence of five years in Sing Sing.

De Valdor was brought here from Sing Sing, where he was serving a sentence of from 16 months to two and a half years on another violation.

Albert Visconti, 42, who pleaded guilty to attempted grand larceny in the Beeson case, is awaiting sentence.

The two men, in June, 1930, were alleged to have sold Miss Beeson, a sister of Charles K. Beeson, vice president of the Pittsburgh Steel Company, a block of worthless railroad bonds.

Mother Cleared In Picnic Deaths

LEBANON, Ind., May 9.—(INS.)—Mrs. Carrie Simmons, 46, of Greenfield, Ind., today was freed of all charges arising out of the June 21, 1931, picnic party in Memorial Park at which her two daughters, Alice Jean, 10, and Virginia, 14, were killed and five other persons were made seriously ill by eating strychnine-loaded chicken sandwiches. The cases were dismissed on the motion of Mrs. Simmons' attorneys who asked dismissal on the grounds of lack of prosecution.

3 Held in Slaying Of Girl Released

PHILADELPHIA, May 9.—(AP.)—Three more arrested for questioning in connection with the slaying of an 18-year-old girl in North Adam, Mass., were released today on word from there that the men are not wanted.

They were arrested on request of North Adams police who are investigating the killing of Leah Lloyd Johnson.

CHICAGO MAPS RACKET WAR

CHICAGO, May 9.—(AP.)—A war to the finish on Chicago labor racketeers was declared jointly today by Mayor Edward J. Kelly and State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney following a conference with leaders of organized labor which begun in the Mayor's office in the City Hall and ended in his home.

While refusing to reveal what transpired at the meeting, Mayor Kelly said that the situation was one that needed action, not ballyhoo.

The session was called last night following a strike of the outlaw coal teamsters' union had the reported effect of closing 108 of the city's 200 coal yards.

SEEKS RACKET BILL ACTION

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP.)—Early consideration of his resolution calling for an investigation by a senatorial committee into racketeering was sought today by Senator Copeland, (Dem.), of New York.

The resolution is before the Commerce Committee and the Senator is hopeful of obtaining favorable action this week. That committee would make the inquiry into beer, milk and other racketeering practices.

The committee would recommend legislation to destroy the evil.

Mt. Washington Fire Routs Couple

Fire of undetermined origin swept the two-story frame home of John Joyce, 208 Wilbert street, Mt. Washington, last night. Joyce and his wife fled into the street when the flames were discovered. Firemen estimated the damage at $2,500.

PEGGY PUTS BAN ON SLEUTHS

LARCHMONT, N. Y., May 9.—(Universal.)—If A. C. Blumenthal wants to come home, that's all right with his little play-producing wife, Peggy Fears.

But if he starts sending private detectives around to their summer home here, servants on guard at each of the four doors are instructed to greet them with the simple salutation:

"Phooey!"

Miss Fears is fed up with detectives, since she had to get Chief of Police William J. Keresay, of Larchmont, to dislodge a few of them over the week-end when she arrived at her home with a party of guests only to find her keys no longer fit the locks.

And she has told the servants to be nice and polite if her husband calls. They are to say:

"Good afternoon, Mr. Blumenthal. It's nice to see you back."

But as to private detectives—Miss Fears is not at home to them.

Allderdice High Debaters Victors

Members of the Taylor Allderdice High School Motor Club defeated the Perry High School Motor Club in a debate, "Compulsory Automobile Insurance Legislation Should Be Passed in Pennsylvania," yesterday. It was held in Taylor Allderdice High School.

Edith Barnett and C. Morton Bachrach, Jr., upheld the affirmative against Robert Riester and Merrill Brethauer. Norman L. Park, safety director for the Pittsburgh Motor Club, was chairman.

Passenger Awarded $3,750 in Smashup

Wede Tordolina, 22, of Holidays Cove, W. Va., was awaraded $3,750 in Federal Court today for injuries he received when a truck in which he was riding as guest of Patrick Carr hit a pole.

A federal jury also awarded $5,000 to Mrs. Alma Abood, of Central City, Pa., for damages incurred when a car driven by Miss Jean Turner, of Youngstown, O., killed Carl G. Abood, her husband, in an auto accident.

BUCK CROUSE'S SUIT DELAYED

Judge George V. Moore today discharged the jury and postponed until September trial of the $97,000 suit of Albert (Buck) Crouse, former pugilist, against Louis A. Park, owner of the Park Building.

Crouse on the witness stand late yesterday had testified regarding discussion of a possible settlement.

The defense contended this was not permissible and prejudiced their case. Judge Moore, after a hearing in chambers this morning, upheld the defense's stand.

Crouse's claim is for alleged services as private physical instructor for Park. He testified he had received $2,615 on an oral agreement whereas he was to receive $100,000.

SINGER LEAVES PUBLIC MUSIC

Mrs. J. Sharp McDonald, of Sewickley, who had sung at Memorial Day services and G. A. R. reunions for 64 years, bequeathed her music to Carnegie Library by her will, filed for probate today.

The music, she stipulates, is for "education of students who are interested in the same kind of music and have not the opportunity of purchasing compositions of such character."

Mrs. McDonald's estate apparently had shrunk from the time her will was made in 1929. It was estimated at only $300. She made bequests of $100 and $200 to 14 boy and girl friends and $1,000 to Bert H. Smyers, whom she names executor.

CROWDS PASS AS GUNMAN ROBS STORE

Police today sought a nattily-dressed gunman who held up the Schulte Cigar Store, Fifth avenue and Market street, while crowds of home-bound theater patrons passed by shortly before last midnight.

James Murray, the clerk, alone in the store, was threatened with a revolver by the thug who commanded:

"Hand over the cash and put it in a bag, too!"

Murray handed the gunman a bag containing $35. The thug asked about a $10 bill which he had seen a customer tender in payment for a package of cigarets several hours before. Murray explained the greater portion of the day's receipts had been collected by the manager.

Ordering the clerk to lie on the floor behind the counter, the thug fled into the street and disappeared in the crowds.

THUGS INVADE HOME

Two men robbed Mrs. Mildred Collins in her home, 5506 Raleigh street, after telling her they had come to help her husband, who, they said, was in trouble, according to police report.

Suspicious, Mrs. Collins attempted to run out to summon aid. One of the men seized her and knocked her to the floor while his accomplice ransacked the house. The pair fled after finding $20 in a purse.

EAST END ROBBERY

Threatening her with a revolver, a Negro robbed Mrs. Elizabeth Schallenbrand of $4 in cash and a $9 merchandise slip in her second-floor apartment at 130 South St. Clair street yesterday. The Negro gained entrance when she answered his knock on the door, she said.

19 Guns Ordered For Governors By Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt has put state governors on a parity with members of the Cabinet so far as salutes are concerned.

The chief executive modified Army and Navy regulations to give the governors a 19-gun salute instead of 17. The 19 guns previously were fired only for members of the Cabinet.

COLLEGE DEBUT FOR U. S. OPERA

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP.)—The American-made opera, "Merry Mount," which had been pointed for a Metropolitan Opera House premier, will instead make its world bow at the May festival of the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, May 20.

It will be as nearly all-American as an opera could be, with its composer, Dr. Howard Hason, a native of Wahoo, Neb., and the librettist, Richard L. Stokes, a former St. Louis and New York newspaperman. The story itself is completely American, with cavaliers, Puritans and Indians as the characters involved.

Further emphasizing its Americanism has been the assignment of principal roles to leading American singers—John Charles Thomas, Rose Bampton, Leonora Corona and Charles Baromeo among others.

KLINE MUST PAY BY MONDAY

Costs of the trial of former Mayor Charles H. Kline at Butler must be paid by next Monday, it was learned at the office of District Attorney Andrew T. Park yesterday. Thus far they have been reduced to $800.

Agreement on the time was reached at a conference between Attorney Edward G. Coll, representing the former mayor, and County Detective David Drexler, representing the District Attorney's office.

Originally the costs amounted to $1,521.16, levied by the Supreme Court because, it was said, of the unwillingness of 35 witnesses to waive fees. The fees were levied as a part of the sentence by which Kline paid $5,000 fine and resigned from office rather than serve a jail sentence.

THEFT SUSPECT TRIES SUICIDE

While pointing out to police the places in the Edgewood district which he said he had helped rob, John Tomasic, 18, tried to end his life last night by leaping in front of a truck, police reported. Tomasic, who lives at 316 Third street, Rankin, was knocked down, but not injured. He is being held on three charges of robbery.

Joseph Vargo, 19, of 339 Third avenue, an alleged accomplice, was caught digging at cell bolts to escape from the Edgewood Police Station. Six of the eight cell bolts had been loosened, police said. He was arrested Sunday with Tomasic, accused of 100 robberies totaling about $15,000, according to police.

Don't MAKE THE MISTAKE I MADE about Gas Heat.

"OF course I always wanted gas heat. I wanted the comfort and convenience and cleanliness of it. But like so many people I know, I had an idea that it would cost more than I could afford.

"How wrong I was! The cost of heating my home with gas last winter—and I mean automatic heat, maintained at a constant temperature, without one particle of attention or work on my part—was only slightly more than that of the hit or miss, hot and cold heating service I got before I turned to gas. And under the present rates, even that low cost will be reduced.

"Don't make the mistake I did. Don't keep on using inferior fuels just because you think gas heat will cost more. Get the facts. Ask your gas company, or your heating contractor to survey your home and tell you just what gas heat will cost. They will be glad to do it—carefully, scientifically, accurately—without the slightest obligation on your part."

Now is the time to get an accurate estimate of the cost of gas heat for your home. There is no charge for this service. Get in touch with your Gas Company or heating contractor, or send in coupon below. Do it now.

DINNER HONORS JUDGE LENCHER

Leaders of Pittsburgh's legal, business and political circles honored Judge Benjamin Lencher, recently appointed to the County Court, at a testimonial dinner last night in the Smithfield Grill.

Attorney Thomaas M. Marshall, Jr., in a laudatory talk reviewed briefly the new judge's career. Judge Lencher expressed his appreciation.

Among those present were District Attorney Andrew T. Park, County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, James M. Malone, Edgar J. Kaufmann, Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell, Clerk of Courts S. J. Topley, Superior Court Judge Joseph Stadtfeld, United States District Court Judge Robert M. Gibson, and Judges Richard A. Kennedy, Samuel J. McKim, M. A. Musmanno, Thomas P. Trimble, H. Walton Mitchell, Harry H. Rowand, George V. Moore, Elder W. Marshall, Frank P. Patterson, Samuel H. Gardner, W. H. Dithrich, William H. McNaugher, Ralph H. Smith, and the newest member, F. A. Piekarski.

DENIES CHARGE OF HUSBAND

Mrs. Lillian Buel, 3414 Fleetwood street, contesting the divorce suit of Police Lieut. Robert W. Buel, yesterday denied his charge that she "ran around with other men."

Mrs. Buel testified before Judge Thomas M. Marshall that she saw her husband's car in front of a house in Columbus avenue 40 or 50 times and saw it several times at a house in Brighton road. She added:

"On one occasion when I was out for a ride with my son and his young lady friend I found my husband out with another woman.

"They were in the front seat and sitting close together."

Mrs. Buel also denied she raised a disturbance in the Woods Run Police Station where her husband was a lieutenant. She was corroborated by her son, who also testified his mother did not go out with other men as charged by his father.

Grand Opera Mule Saved From Bone Yard

ST. LOUIS, May 9.—(AP.)—Millie, jobless grand opera mule, has been saved from the boneyard.

For 12 years Millie has stamped the operatic stage, appearing from coast to coast. In her mulish way she has starred in "Pagliacci" and other attractions.

Last week when the curtain rang down on the last performance of "Pagliacci" in Chicago, Millie was without a job. She was faced with starvation or a life of shame on the front end of an ash cart.

But Guy Golterman, who is planning a season of grand opera in St. Louis to dedicate a new $5,000,000 auditorium and community center in January, came to her rescue. He directed that Millie be shipped to him.

Youngstown Prelate Received by Pope

VATICAN CITY, May 9.—(AP.)—Pope Pius today received Archbishop Edward A. Mooney, of Youngstown, O., the apostolic delegate to Japan.

SHOWMAN BUYS CAPONE 'TANK'

CHICAGO, May 9.—(AP.)—It seems an armored brougham Al Capone reputedly used in his travels is destined to go back into service—in England in a sideshow.

Detectives of Police Lieut. John Treacy's bomb squad noticed the car packed on a lot and deployed themselves to await the owners, believing they would be gangsters. After an hour's wait three men got into the machine, but they certainly didn't look like hoodlums. And one of them protested:

"Why, I'm Henry E. La Breque, of 66 Cromwell road, Earls Court, London, England."

He explained he purchased the car from Patrick Moore, of Bloomington, Ill., and the latter said he bought it on Chicago's South Side on the understanding Capone once owned it.

Joseph R. Lyons, a broker employed to help ship the car to London for use in a sideshow, was with La Breque and Moore. All three of the men were released.

EMPTY LARDER AIDED BY SHOW

Father Cox is really poorer than the poor. His immediate and urgent need for funds and food, was, perhaps, most vividly illustrated at the Liberty Theater food benefit, East Liberty, Sunday. He had sent a dozen men of his unemployed army out to the theater to handle the donations as they came in. As usual a Sun-Telegraph representative was there and along about 4 o'clock the man in charge of this crew said to him:

"Do you mind if I take enough of this food back to the church to supply these men with their supper. Otherwise they will not get any food tonight as there isn't even a loaf of bread on hand for anybody at our headquarters."

Of course consent was given and the men who worked all the afternoon were given a substantial supper. This incident, better than any other, tells the real facts about conditions with Father Cox and this is one of the reasons why the Sun-Telegraph is helping him.

The Father Cox-Sun-Telegraph subscription drive brings in almost enough money to pay for the food for the breadline at Old St. Patrick's, but the "father of the jobless" must still depend on voluntary contributions of money and food to provide for the hundreds of families that come to him every day for aid. Every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page or is telephoned in with the request that Father Cox be given credit for it, brings to his unemployment relief fund a liberal cash commission.

Meadville Prohibits Theater Graduation

MEADVILLE, Pa., May 9.—(AP.)—Plans for the Meadville School Board to hold the June commencement exercises in the high school auditorium were not changed at its regular meeting here today, despite the protests from the 205 members of the graduating class.

The seniors contended that the school auditorium lacks adequate capacity for the members of the class and those invited to the exercises. They accepted an offer from a local theater manager to hold the exercises there on Sunday night, June 4, but the plan was rejected by the board.

Socialist to Speak To Brookline Group

David Rinn, of Brookline, county executive secretary of the Socialist party, will be chief speaker at a public meeting in Brookline School, at 8 p. m. tomorrow. "Can the New Deal Bring Prosperity to the American Worker" will be discussed. It is planned to form a permanent Socialist party community group.

Settlement Makes Camping Schedule

The Irene Kaufmann Settlement today announced its 1933 camping schedule. Emma Kaufmann Camp, near Zelienople, will open June 19 and close August 25. Five camping periods, including one for mothers, two for boys and two for girls, are designated during the summer.

SLAYER'S WIFE TO TESTIFY

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 9.—(AP.)—Tom Merrick, Denver basketball star, told a District Court jury last night of the slaying of his friend and teammate, Henry Downs, by his older brother, E. P. (Percy) Merrick, after Downs allegedly had attacked Mrs. Merrick.

Mrs. Merrick was expected to testify today in behalf of her husband, a former state highway officer.

The curly-haired young athlete told of the scene, April 15, when his brother ordered Downs, his guest, out of the house. He said his brother told Downs:

"Never breathe a word of this, or I'll follow you from coast to coast and blow your brains out."

"Downs tried to apologize and answered that if it would ease Percy's mind he wished he would blow his brains out."

The shooting occurred the day after the alleged attack.

This Is One Time Above All When Your Spending IS Saving!

We're not going to venture the sad fate accorded Lot's wife by looking back at the dark days from which we are now emerging. But it's pretty plain that the whole dreary business was caused by an overdose of that oft-lauded habit called "saving." People deprived themselves of little luxuries first, then the things they wanted, and finally such necessities as clothing. What happened to the money they saved is history.

Today there is a new philosophy. We hear people saying, "You bet we're going to buy the things we want—and enjoy them. Only wish we had done it before. We would have more now." They say it up on the furniture floor ... in the drapery departments ... on the fashion floors. And it is sound and thoughtful logic, especially now at Anniversary Sale savings. We've got a hunch that this new idea means that all of us are going forward!

GIMBELS ANNIVERSARY

APPEAL BY F. R. BOOSTS PAY OF THOUSANDS

CHICAGO, May 9.—(AP.)—Several corporations over the country today responded to President Roosevelt's request to boost wages on the heels of advancing commodity prices.

E. L. Cord, declaring the increased purchasing power resulting from expanded activities and higher payrolls would "help the country most," announced all employes of firms he heads would receive a 5 per cent wage increase effective May 10. The order affected some 10,000 persons.

From South Carolina came word that 9,000 workers in a score of textile mills had received pay increases of 10 per cent.

10 PER CENT INCREASE

The American Store Equipment Corporation said it would boost wages of 400 employes 10 per cent.

Others swelling the pay increase chorus were the Standard Kid Company, Wilmington, Del., a 7 per cent advance; the Columbian Peanut Company, 10 to 20 per cent for employes of its 26 mills in 25 states, and J. S. Bache & Co., brokerage firm, with wires to branch offices in many cities, 10 per cent.

John W. Whitehead, president of the Norwalk Tire and Rubber Company, said his company would pay its workers a 5 per cent weekly bonus on earnings. Last Friday the Artistic Shirt Company, Albany, N. Y., raised wages of some 2,000 employes 10 per cent.

Announcement of a 10 per cent wage increase was made today by the Supreme Shirt Company, of Philadelphia, effective May 12.

Ford Sees U. S. Revival And Plans Sales Drive

NEW YORK, May 9.—Henry Ford, in an open letter to the American public, which will form the first advertisement of a new advertising campaign, will declare:

"We have made a complete turn-around and at last America's face is toward the future."

The campaign will represent the first advertising done by Ford Motor Company since March 31, 1932, it was announced, and will make use of daily and weekly newspapers throughout the country.

The letter, over the motor magnate's signature, dated May 9, at Dearborn, Mich., will say:

"Three years—1929 to 1932—we Americans looked backward. Inauguration day President Roosevelt turned the ship of state around. Having observed the failure of sincere efforts to haul us back the way we came, he designed a new method—new political and financial machinery—to pull us out the way we are going—forward.

"He is clearing international obstacles out of the way; he does not stand in awe of tariffs. The people begin to feel that he does not take advice from the 'interests'; that he has courage and loyalty to work for one supreme interest only—the welfare of the American people."

PAY INCREASED AS TRADE GAINS

A barometer of the new trend toward recovery is seen in the offer of $11 a week for a woman house servant, Bucher said, as compared with $2 and $3 offers received heretofore.

Expansion in the "white collar" bracket of industry is also indicated by the recent transfer of five branch sales managers to other cities as general sales managers, auguring that their concerns are spreading their activities.

The general employment scene is brightened by the report that more than 500 families in the Pittsburgh district have withdrawn from the welfare lists because at least one of their members had secured regular employment.

Pittsburgh joined in the recovery wave of the nation affecting the basic industries as well as general manufactures.

All vital phases of the commercial and production machine today reported an increase in buying with consequent increase in work hours for employes.

Orders for major equipment have been placed with the United Engineering and Foundry Company by the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation and the Republic Iron and Steel Company, it was announced.

In addition to the mills, which constitute the major portion of this equipment, the announcement stated, the concern also has orders for supplementary equipment.

PRODUCTION GAIN

All large steel concerns in the district agreed today that production has increased during the past two or three weeks and that their employes are getting more hours of work a week.

Because of the spread-the-work plan adopted by these companies, the increase will not be reflected immediately in larger employment figures, but is directly reflected in larger pay checks for the present payrolls.

Will H. Watson, Burgess of Donora, said today, according to the Associated Press, that six open hearth furnaces are operating and that a blooming mill is running for the first time in five years.

The Steelton plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company announced it would resume operation of three open hearth furnaces about May 15, after being idle since last August.

Three hundred names have been taken off Donora's relief list, the Burgess said.

At Avella, the Penobscot mine No. 2, idle for two months, resumed today with 350 men employed. About 250 men will be given work when the Bertha Consumers Coal Company mine at Louise, W. Va., resumes next week, it is reported.

WHEELING PICK-UP

Almost 2,000 men were sent back to work by the recent sharp upswing in steel mill activity in Wheeling, W. Va., the Associated Press reports. The Martin's Ferry plant of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company has resumed operations with 1,250 men after an idleness of three months.

Weirton Steel Company has put 200 men to work at the Pope tin plant.

Steel men stated today that the Wheeling district is now at about 60 per cent of capacity of steel making, compared with 46 per cent a week ago, and the Follansbee tin plant in that district is operating at 100 per cent.

From another part of the district comes the report that 500 miners will return to the mines of the Northwestern Mining and Exchange Company at Dagus mines, Elk County.

Industrial leaders of the Pittsburgh district enthusiastically received the encouraging report issued by the Cleveland Federal Reserve Bank noting that industry and business within the Fourth Federal Reserve District, including Pittsburgh, has transcended all high points for the past 21 months.

New U. S. Hope Lies in Sound Industry at Home, Donham Says

By WALLACE B. DONHAM,

In an Address Delivered at the Wharton Alumni Institute, Philadelphia; Reprinted From the Harvard Business Review of April, 1933.

EXCEPT as other things interfere, particularly except as our effort to export manufactured goods interferes, our basic international trade policies are now so directed that they make possible the exchanges necessary for us to obtain needed raw materials in trade for our exports of raw materials. Beyond this our primary problems are domestic.

Mr. Donham

We must not delude ourselves. The only way we can maintain and increase our present exports is by increasing imports of manufactured goods which will in the main directly compete with established home industries.

Shall we gain by shifting social groups now surrounding these industries into other areas and other industries whose exports may grow? Even with our mobile labor such a policy will add social strains which may well overwhelm us.

The prices of our export crops not only abroad but at home are controlled in the international markets. I cannot see how we can straighten out any of these crop situations so long as we limit our thinking to the international markets or seek our general salvation at price levels determined in these markets.

Even if we change the living habits of our own people, we cannot change the living habits of our competitors. If we restrict production, the rest of the world will go into the international markets and by filling the demand keep prices down.

Our farmers who grow cash export crops will remain on living standards imposed from abroad so long as they are subject to this international price situation.

Exported wheat must continue to be priced in international markets, but the portion of the wheat crop consumed at home need not have its price level determined internationally.

We have overstimulated the production of many home consumed crops. Such crops must be regulated so that farmers secure a fair living. The stability of one-third of our people depends on such problems.

Our desire to collect the public and private debts owed us abroad; our wish to export mass production products, our willingness and indeed our urgent pressure to export vast quantities of petroleum products, our allowing haphazard oil production against every principle of national defense and conservation of resources for our descendants; all these add to the difficulty of establishing international markets soundly related to the rest of our national life.

Every raw material of which we have an export surplus is now tangled with an international situation over which we have no control. Great groups of our people have their whole status determined by these uncontrollable factors.

There are two possibilities ahead and, so far as I can see, only two.

The first is to go on as we are, admitting or even asserting that there is no way of solving the problems of these fellow countrymen except by solving the problems of a world we neither control nor understand.

The other possibility is to study the various needs of our groups now involved in the world chaos and so far as lies in our power to meet their needs and stabilize them through domestic policies directed toward maintaining a balanced national life.

If we are to progress at all on the farm problem we must apply internal remedies and establish controls where they are within our power, at and within our national borders.

For generations we maintained by tariffs price levels on manufactured goods above the world price levels. This helped establish by the side of a prosperous farming community a widely varied industrial life with the high standards of living made possible by our great resources and our high average productivity of labor.

The policy then, as now, hampered exports of manufactured goods. Somehow we prospered.

We should now restore our farmers to their old relative position without disturbing these established domestic industries in their home markets.

To restore the farmer we should maintain in our home market price levels on the great export crops above the world price levels. Of course, if we reduce our production of these crops to the amount consumed at home, we can accomplish this easily by tariffs.

But this involves transferring hundreds of thousands of our farmers into industry, a process utterly impossible until we solve our unemployment problem. Certainly industry cannot absorb these people at the present time, and, unlike farming, industry when it loses its power to employ men is not even a way of living.

Much current thinking about the farmer overemphasizes the immediate importance of immediate limitation of output. In our export crops this is sound sociological policy only when alternative and dependable modes of living in industry are possible. The agricultural problems involved in our home-consumed products must obviously be solved internally. In any event, therefore, remedies for our farm problem, whether in export crops or home-consumed crops, must be sought primarily at home.

But it will be said that our manufacturers must have exports. Before we gamble our whole national stake on exports, let us consider this statement.

There are only two major classes of manufactured products for which the amounts normally exported exceed 10 per cent of their total production. These are: (a) machinery, of which in the five years, 1926-1930, while the foreign demand was temporarily huge, we exported 42 per cent of the amount we produced; and (b) refined petroleum of which, in the same period, we exported 18 per cent of the product of our refineries.

The exports of machinery by England, Germany and the United States from 1924 to 1931, inclusive, were about $6,750,000 . . .

The parts of the world not yet industrialized will try to produce at home those things which falling prices for their own commodities make unattainable. For this purpose they will import machinery, but by so much as they succeed, international trade is no longer necessary.

The exports of non-agricultural machinery by England, Germany and the United States from 1924 to 1931 were four times what went to Russia and probably made unnecessary something like 20 per cent of the world's trade.

Ability to use automatic machinery is not confined to a few nations. We have been building four Russias.

Clearly this market for machinery is not only a diminishing market, but these exports make all other exports more difficult. In so far as the rest of the world needs them, they should continue, but machinery manufacturers must expect declining foreign markets.

As for petroleum products, our responsibility for the nation's future should lead at once to measures stabilizing this industry under conditions which stop the shocking waste of a great national asset both through short-sighted domestic policies and through these exports.

Can our other manufacturers find prosperity by increasing 5 per cent of their normal production and neglecting 95 per cent?

We have established a great variety of industries, to the lasting advantage of the nation. We should so handle our tariff and other policies that these industries with their large amount of capital and labor can prosper through their home markets.

The alternative is to sacrifice many of them in futile efforts to restore prosperity by exchanging our weekly wash with Germany and England in attempts to create a fictitious international division of labor.

In the international field understanding eludes our capacity and controls are impossible. Our political conditions make wise handling of foreign affairs peculiarly difficult.

Is American leadership ready to leave our whole fortune to the blind working out of forces which we neither understand nor control?

If leadership is not ready to abdicate, we should face the facts and concentrate our attention on home problems, so difficult to understand that they challenge our best efforts and so hard to control that they involve problems of the first magnitude.

Where have we a better chance to regain the lost customers of American business—in the wholly uncontrollable foreign market, subject to all the risks of changing foreign policies legitimately adopted to meet varying local needs, or at home where, if we have wisdom, we can exercise controls and maintain equilibrium?

(To Be Continued.)

G. M. C. REPORTS SALES GAIN

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP.)—General Motors Corporation has reported sales during April of 86,967 cars to dealers in United States and Canada, compared with 58,018 the previous month and 78,359 in April, 1932.

DAYTON, O., May 9.—(AP.)—E. G. Biechler, president of Frigidaire Corporation, announced the company would more than double its production this month over May, 1932. Beichler said refrigerator orders were greatly increasing.

AKRON, O., May 9.—(AP.)—The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company reported it recalled 500 employes during April and is now recalling 500 more. The General Tire and Rubber Company is running at capacity. All major rubber factories here are now working four shifts of six hours each, daily.

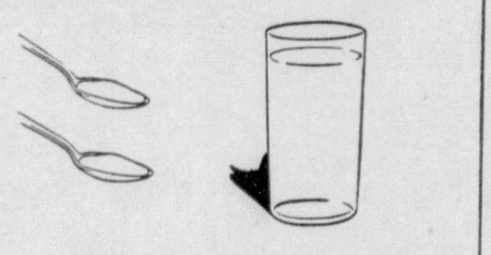
THAT UPSET MORNING FEELING YOU HAVE

Nine Chances in Ten It's "Acid Stomach"

How You Can Easily Correct It

Almost Instant Relief This Way



TAKE—2 teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water every morning when you get up. Take another teaspoonful thirty minutes after eating. And another before you go to bed.

According to many authorities, some 80% of the people of today have acid stomach. This because so many foods, comprising the modern diet, are acid forming foods.

It usually makes itself felt in headaches, nausea, "gas," "biliousness," and most frequently in stomach pains that come about thirty minutes after eating. So you can easily tell if you have it.

Now Quickly and Easily Corrected

If you do have acid stomach, don't worry about it. You can correct it in a very simple manner. Just do this. It will alkalize your acid soaked stomach almost immediately. You will feel like another person.

TAKE—2 teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia with a glass of water every morning when you get up. Take another teaspoonful thirty minutes after eating. And another before you go to bed.

What This Does

That's all you do. But you do it regularly, EVERY DAY, so long as you have any symptoms of distress.

This acts to neutralize the stomach acids that foster your "upset" stomach, that invite headaches and that feeling of lassitude and lost energy.

Try it. Results will amaze you. Your head will be clear. You'll forget you have a stomach.

BUT—be careful that you get REAL milk of magnesia when you buy: genuine PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia. See that the name "Phillips" is stamped clearly on the label.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM:

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

POPE TO VISIT ROME MAY 25

VATICAN CITY, May 9.—(AP.)—Prelates said today the date of the long-discussed departure of the Pope from Vatican City to visit the Basilica of St. John Lateran in Rome definitely has been fixed for Ascension Day, May 25.

The Pontiff will drive privately to the basilica, accompanied by prelates of the papal court.

Cardinal Marchetti-Selvaggiani, high priest of the basilica, will celebrate mass, after which the Pope probably will give a public benediction from an external balcony and then visit the nearby holy stairs.

RODGERS TO AIR RELIEF VIEWS

William B. Rodgers, Pittsburgher who resigned as executive director of the State Emergency Relief Board, will present his views on emergency relief at a meeting of the Bellevue Board of Trade tonight.

While Rodgers denied at the time of his resignation last month that there had been a rift with Gov. Pinchot, it was known they held different opinions on commissaries and community markets.

Rodgers, a resident of Bellevue, will speak at 8 o'clock in the Borough Hall. His address was expected to be of special interest to relief and social service workers.

Sigmi Phi Epsilon To Hear Secretary

William L. Phillips, Richmond, Va., grand secretary of the Sigmi Phi Epsilon fraternity, will be guest speaker at the local chapter's annual banquet at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow in Webster Hall.

Epworth League To Present Drama

"An Old-Fashioned Mother," three-act play, will be presented by the Epworth League of the North Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church on Thursday and Friday evenings. The League of Calvary Church will co-operate.

Kickers in Ireland

The famous Irish sweepstakes lure Solly Ward and his "Kickers Club" to Ireland for the weekly CBS - WJAS tomfoolery at 10.

* * *

Concluding his series of symphonic "contrast concerts," Dr. Walter Damrosch offers representative works of Schubert and Wagner on WCAE at 10:30 tonight. Theodore Webb, baritone, and Alma Kitchell, contralto, are soloists. The program marks the completion of Dr. Damrosch's tenth broadcasting season.

Selections from the works of Cesar Franck comprise tonight's "Great Composers" broadcast by Howard Barlow and the Columbia Symphony Orchestra over WJAS at 10:45.

* * *

Frank Moulan, noted Gilbert and Sullivan actor now starring in the Broadway revival of "Yeomen of the Guard," occupies the Sanderson-Crumit guest spot on WCAE at 8.

Bachman on Air

Elmer Bachman, Pittsburgh tenor, who recently returned from Florida, goes on the air from WJAS at 11:15 tonight. On the same station at 7:15, Martha Lewis, sister of WJAS Engineer Art Lewis, presents a 15-minute piano recital.

* * *

A brief talk on National Cotton Week, to be observed May 15-20, by George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, features the WJAS "Threads of Happiness" presentation on WJAS at 9:15.

* * *

"Aids to Legislation" is the topic of the weekly KDKA "You and Your Government" round table discussion at 7:15. Henry W. Toll, director of the American Legislators' Association; Edwin E. Witte, director of the Wisconsin Legislative Reference Library, and DeWitt Billman, director of the Illinois Reference Bureau, are the speakers.

Olsen Spikes New Radio Racket

By AIRCASTER

Reeling around with the radio reporter:

Smoothies with linguistic ability canvass apartments, claiming to be sent by school superintendents, explaining to fond mammas and papas that unusual musical talent was discovered among kids in family.

Kids and parents are invited to downtown office where radio auditions are heard. Small fee exacted until children are inveigled into taking microphone course for so much per lesson. Smoothies have no connection with schools or studios.

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

First let me get some of these inquiries concerning the Bab's Zinnia seeds off my mind.

In response to May 2 and preceding Sunday's coupons, they are being mailed out steadily. The Newark horticulturist who is handling it for us wires that everything will be up to date by today. You should receive your seeds, if you have not already received them, any mail now.

We expect some complaints. Several have omitted to say what state they live in and others have given no address at all. Those coupons have been sent back to us and the Garden Department is supplying the information where possible.

Seven always was a lucky number for some of the Globe Trotters but it has an added significance to Ken Lowe, the stereotyper. His little girl, who made her advent in the world on the seventh day of May, weighed seven pounds and seven ounces and was timed at seven minutes to twelve. It's the first child.

He's a nice fellow, too.

JUNIOR LEAGUE OFFERS ART BY STERN

By PENELOPE REDD

The Junior League presents through the next fortnight an exhibition by S. Tilden Stern, a young Pittsburgh artist, who has received an enthusiastic press on the occasions of his New York exhibitions at the Marie Harriman and also at the Midtown Galleries. Mr. Stern experiments in many mediums, in the 30 oils, water colors, lithographs, drawings in lithographic pencil, and studies in pastel for decorative development.

Miss Redd

His paintings in oil, one feels, are deliberately monochromatic. With the drawings in black and white, they may be considered as a pictorial entity.

Landscapes cannot be identified as painted directly from any of the painter's hunting grounds such as Woodstock or New Hope. Stern, of the younger generation, accepts only the visual idea from the original source and transmutes it into the universal through the addition of his own respectful perceptions of the livingness of wind and water, earth, rocks and trees.

"Sleeping Rocks" are resting creatures imbued with life and not inanimate solids. "Two Trees" suggest colloquially "Darby and Joan" or "Pyramus and Thisbe" to the more classic minded because of their air of companionship through time.

"The Wind Howls" is personified by trees twisted about as if in pain. "At the Park" shows trees again, but calmly domesticated.

RELIEF BONDS LACK BIDDERS

No bids were received today for the $700,000 City of Pittsburgh bonds, $500,000 of which were to provide direct relief and $200,000 to improve the city's water supply.

Controller James P. Kerr attributes the absence of bids to the 4 per cent interest.

In the event the bonds cannot be disposed of at private sale, there is enough money in the sinking fund to purchase the $500,000 relief bonds to insure help to Pittsburgh's needy, Dr. Kerr said.

The Controller explained that the city is now privileged to begin selling the bonds over the counter. He said:

"I am confident it can be done."

Two years ago the city's bond issue of $570,000 went begging for bidders for two months after which the major part was sold to the Union Trust Company.

RUTH, BANKER, ASKS PAROLE

UNIONTOWN, Pa., May 9.—A parole for Linford F. Ruth, 75, Connellsville banker who served 18 months of a four-year sentence, was asked in court here today. Poor health, sufficient punishment and heavy financial losses while a prisoner are given as reasons for seeking parole.

Ruth was convicted November, 1931, of misapplication of funds of the Title and Trust Company of Western Pennsylvania in Connellsville, of which he was the head. It was charged he obtained approximately $100,000 from the bank by issuing loans to himself and associates on collateral paper of coal companies, whose values were fictitious. In addition to the four-year sentence, he was fined $5,000 and costs. A hearing was set for June 3.

Woman Sentenced In Death of Baby

Lillian Hickey, 23, no home, was sentenced to an indefinite term in the women's prison, Muncy, Pa., today, when she pleaded guilty in Criminal Court to throwing her new born baby out a bathroom window at 807 Sebring street, where she was working as a domestic. Medical authorities reported that she has the mentality of a 9-year-old girl.

NIECE SHARES IN BIG ESTATE

NEW YORK, May 9.—Mrs. Kenneth Witherow, 5726 Kentucky avenue, Pittsburgh, is listed as beneficiary in half million dollar estate left by her uncle, the late Joseph F. Stier, New York lawyer and realtor, according to appraisal of his estate filed yesterday by New York State Transfer Tax Department.

She is left $750 outright, half income from $40,000 trust, and at death of her father, Jacob S. Stier, fourth share of $50,000 trust and $65,000, representing a sixth of the residue.

Stier, who died March 11, 1932, left an estate which was appraised at $763,105 gross value, $683,098 net. Bulk is stock in a Broadway realty company of which he was president.

War Mother, 77, To Make Pilgrimage

Among a group of Gold Star Mothers who will leave New York May 17 for a pilgrimage to the graves of American soldiers killed in France will be Mrs. Kate Baum Negley, 77, of 118 Shetland avenue.

Her son, Norman N. Negley, was killed in action, but no trace of him was found. Mrs. Negley will visit a memorial building in Paris, where his name is inscribed. She will be accompanied by her daughter, Miss Florence Negley.

Ushers of Church Giving Two Plays

"Prof. Dummelhead's Class," a one-act comedy, and "Winning an Heiress," a two-act farce, will be presented by the Corpus Christi Ushers' Club in the church auditorium, Lincoln avenue and Churchland street, tonight and tomorrow night. Joseph J. Keenan is the director.

'NOBODY'S BABY' AGAIN IN DIRE NEED

LOS ANGELES, May 9.—(AP.)—A little girl, who was known only as "Nobody's Baby" in Indianapolis nine years ago, is again in dire need of her parents.

Search for them has been started by Mrs. Orvall E. Tincher, of Los Angeles, prosperous when she took custody of the abandoned infant in 1923, but who has become ill and nearly destitute, to provide proper care for Betty, now 9 years old.

Betty received a great deal of publicity in Indianapolis when she was found, 10 days old, abandoned in a suit box at the door of a public garage. The waif was taken to a city hospital and attendants placed a sign "Nobody's Baby" above her crib while authorities and newspapers conducted an unsuccessful search for her parents.

After 10 days the then Mrs. Faulkner, whose own child had died shortly before, was allowed to take the baby.

Parents, Teachers Meet in Brentwood

The monthly meeting of the Brentwood Parent-Teachers' Association will be held tonight in the Brentwood High School. Lyman White will give an illustrated lecture on "Flower Gardens," using colored pictures.

Final preparations for the annual banquet have been completed for May 19.

Shot by Son, 8, Clergyman Dies

SUDBURY, Ontario, May 9.—(AP.)—The Rev. W. A. Whidden, shot accidentally by his 8-year-old son, Morris, died today.

An older son, George, had loaded a small caliber rifle to shoot at a stray cat. Morris picked up the weapon and pulled the trigger just as his father entered the room.

Mrs. Reineman Wills $70,000 to Husband

The will of Mrs. Hulda Reineman, of 1417 Wightman street, filed today, leaves her $70,000 estate to her husband, Louis E. Reineman, and names him executor.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The One Right Way

Many hands played Contract offer a number of different roads, any one of which may safely be followed to the objective. There are others, however, in which there is only one correct method to play—hands in which an error may not be redeemed, and the chance for game depends upon meticulous play from beginning to end. Such a hand is illustrated below. It occurred in a recent Rubber game at a New York club, the holder of the North hand being Mrs. Ernest Iselin. The hand was:

South, Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

	♠ J 10 9 3 ♡ A J 3 ◇ A J 10 9 ♣ A 9
♠ K 8 7 5 ♡ K 8 2 ◇ 8 7 2 ♣ 7 6 3	North West East South	♠ 6 4 ♡ Q 10 9 7 4 ◇ K Q 3 ♣ 8 5 4
	♠ A Q 2 ♡ 6 5 ◇ 6 5 4 ♣ K Q J 10 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 N.T.	Pass
3 N.T.	Pass	Pass	Pass

The Opening lead by East was the heart 10, a lead which with most Bridge players indicates the possession of a higher honor in the suit. The natural impulse, with North's holding, is to win the first trick, after West plays the King, and trust that the remaining honor in the suit may not be led through and may thus afford a second stopper. This, of course, is entirely wrong. With the apparent division of the honors in the heart suit, North has no right to anticipate that more than one trick can be made, and the play of the cards, in view of the rest of the hand, should follow exactly the same lines as though the heart holding were the Ace and two small ones.

Mrs. Iselin realized this and made no effort to establish a second trick in hearts, holding up the Ace until the third round, so that if a finesse taken into the West hand failed, there could not be a heart to return. This line of play succeeded. The spade Knave was led to the fourth trick and West held up for one round, but had no heart to return.

By this line of play the Declarer was able to make one heart, five clubs, three spades and one diamond. After winning the fifth trick with the spade King, West returned a diamond, but North knew better than to attempt another finesse. He went up with his Ace. The contract with an extra trick was in sight.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Both sides vulnerable; A and B part-score 60. How should the following hands be bid?

A	B
♠ A	♠ K J 10 6 4
♡ 9 8 5 4	♡ A Q 7 6 3
◇ A K 9 5	◇ 8 2
♣ A K J 4	♣ 9

A	B
1 ◇	1 ♠
2 ♣	2 ♡
4 ♡	6 ♡
Pass

With a part-score of 60, B's response of one spade is an Inferential Force. When he bids two hearts over A's two-club bid, he is bidding over game and consequently is showing that his hand is of some value. A holds a very nice fit in hearts and is justified in making a double Jump Raise in that suit. Obviously, this is a strong Slam-try, which should be readily accepted by B.

ORPHAN HEROES GET EXPO TRIP

CLEVELAND, May 9.—(AP.)—Six Passaic (N. J.) orphans, who averted a train wreck recently, will have a pleasant surprise soon, when they find out they are going to the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition as the guest of the Erie Railroad.

President Charles Denney, of the road, said he would invite them to the exposition with the matron of their home.

Pageant to Open B'nai Israel Fete

The B'nai Issrael Synagogue will open the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the laying of its cornerstone with a pageant. "The Voice of Israel" will be presented by the congregation members Thursday in the synagogue. The Rev. Benjamin A. Lichter will conduct the Friday evening services with rabbis from other congregations as guest speakers. The anniversary dinner and dance will be held Sunday at Hotel Schenley.

Pittsburgh Youth Honored at Tufts

Winship W. Story, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester B. Story, of Dithridge street, was awarded a certificate in recognition of his extra-curricular activities on Junior Day, at Tufts College, it was learned here today. Winship, a senior at Tufts, is president of the Athletic Association, a member of the wrestling team and of Tower Cross, honorary senior society.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

MAYOR LEO P. McLAUGHLIN, Hot Springs, Arkansas: My dear Mr. Mayor: As a guy who used to have his troubles with the New York gendarmes (in the midst of a little schoolgirl osculation) I want to thank you for those recent orders relative to public necking.

Students of biology tell us that a moderate bit of these things is normal in the Spring—when a young man fancies. But it does seem good to find that even a mayor knows it!

Mayor O'Brien of our town, who has done a fine job so far, would do a finer one if he followed your example. I wish he would, really—and tell his 18,000 cops to let the adolescents neck. Love, you know, which comes late, is often the most violent. And George Eliot reminds us that there are two things not to be hidden—love and a cough.

CAPTAIN GEORGE FRIED, S. S. Washington, My dear Captain: Congrats and all the usual things that go with wishing a man well. You've been this nation's most illustrious sailor for years, but apparently the Shipping Board has just heard about it. After those thrilling mid-ocean rescues directed by you, which brought honor to the much maligned American Merchant Marine, giving you command of the Washington is belated recognition, indeed. It's about time!

I understand that the usual "politics" kept you from getting the Leviathan, which you should have had long ago. And that you almost quit the sea because of it. They can be cruel down there at the capital, I know, but now you're where you deserve to be and that's all your hero-worshippers really care about. And now that you're running the Washington, one of the greatest of the American liners afloat, sir, when I get the chance I'll risk riding the seas—with you watching over the safety of my tribe.

RUDY VALLEE, ESQ., National Broadcasting Co., No. 711 Fifth Avenue, N. Y. C.: Dear Rudy: Nice to hear you again and your arrangement of "Orchid to You" is very lovely, eteetra. But I must pass along the newest slander on you, which I trust isn't a fact, at all!

They are saying that since you went to the hospital to have your Durante embroidered, you have decided to do your singing through your mouth—until your nose gets better.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE ERIE R. R.: My dear Sir: That thrilling story in all the gazettes about the six orphans, who saved that trainload of people—not to mention one of your trains—gave my heart a tug. Imagine those little boys, who probably have dreamed of such heroics, actually being confronted with the opportunity, and being alert enough to flag the speeding rattler in time!

I understand these young heroes will be rewarded with medals. Well, all right. Medals never made much of an impression on me and they make less of an impression now. So look: The action of the kids must have saved you and your railroad untold sums in potential damage suits, and so forth. It seems to me the least you can do is to give them sugary cash gifts—to be put away, after they've used some of it on goodies for themselves and their colleagues in the orphanage.

So that when they are old enough to go out into the world to shift for themselves, they will have a dollar or two (plus that interest) with which to fight the world. You know as well as I do that the lucky people on that train won't bother to chip in and send a nice lump package of coin to them—so you be the Big Mans and do it. Much obliged.

TO MR. AND MRS. AMERICA: My dear friends: In the last few days I hastened into printer's ink with what I thought and still think was a sane way of stifling the enemies of the nation. It was my wish and hope that nobody (particularly families) should go hungry. I suggested that those of us who could afford to do so—should sacrifice eating one meal a day—so that the money contributed would promote food for others, who find the New Deal just so many words.

I had the scheme worked out carefully. No one would suffer. Many would gain by it. By feeding everybody, it would stop Communism, Socialism and the other arguments, I thought, for with everybody's hunger satisfied—they wouldn't have much to argue about or for.

Also—you wouldn't see breadlines anymore. A man probably wouldn't ask you for coins on the street, for you would then tell him you were contributing your money to people like him. If he said that he had no home you could then remind him that there were organizations to take care of him. I'm still hopped up over the whole plan.

But it is impossible for me to do it alone. There have been dozens of calls from worthy citizens who want to contribute coin and their help—but such a national movement needs nationwide support. It isn't the sort of thing to be born only to die after the excitement fades. You'd think the government would do the job—and by feeding its hungry—they might erase the soap-boxers—or desperate fathers who throw stones through windows. Who, when they are trapped, usually say: "My children are starving. I needed money."

It is my first major flop, and I feel miserable about it. A tiny column like mine isn't strong enough to make it the success it has to be. And so, until I am encouraged by men of power, I must let the matter gather dust. It just seems that when it comes to getting people to give money—no matter how little—you become a bore. I never was knocked out that quickly before. I feel so ashamed.

'Dinner at Eight' Cast Has Many Stars

The complete cast of "Dinner at Eight," film version of the George S. Kaufman-Edna Ferber stage success, which is in production at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, includes Marie Dressler, John and Lionel Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow, Lee Tracy, Edmund Lowe, Billie Burke, Madge Evans, Jean Hersholt, Karen Morley, Louise Closser Hale, Phillips Holmes and May Robson. This is considered the largest assemblage of outstanding names ever brought together in a single screen production. George Cukor is director of the picture version of "Dinner at Eight," screen treatment of which was prepared by Frances Marion.

Joan Crawford Cast For Revue Film

Joan Crawford is the second star cast for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's forthcoming "Hollywood Revue of 1933." Miss Crawford will appear in a musical number called "Black Diamond," music and lyrics for which are being written by the composing teams of Rodgers and Hart. Jean Harlow is the only other member of the cast so far selected. Edmund Goulding, assisted by Alexander Leftwich, will direct "The Hollywood Revue of 1933."

Marc Connelly to Write For Films

Marc Connelly, Broadway playwright, author of "Green Pastures" and other successes, has signed a contract to write for Paramount. Connelly, who left for Hollywood yesterday for his first assignment, joins a distinguished group of stage, screen and fiction writers, including Ben Hecht, Laurence Stallings, William Slavens McNutt, Nunnally Johnson, Samuel Hoffenstein and others. Paramount now has 55 writers on its staff.

Mystery and Rich Comedy Puzzle and Tickle Nixon Crowd

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

So Eugene O'Neill will write plays of nine and 14 acts, will he? George M. Cohan shows him that a play needs only one act. "Pigeons and People," seen at the Nixon Theater last night, is the longest one-act play in existence. It is also the most mysterious mystery play in captivity. For two hours everybody was guessing who Parker is, and when his identity is revealed over the telephone at the close of the play, the two people who hear it promise they won't tell. Yet it is as plain as day—it is "straightaway" like Parker himself. We knew from the beginning who this mysterious Parker was—but we won't tell, either.

The play proves something—that "what's going on around you is pretty interesting, especially when you don't know what it's about." This must be George M. Cohan's formula for writing plays. It works out very well in "Pigeons and People." When the detective Gilroy, played with monumental self-importance by Edward Nannery, called up police headquarters and announced that he has "a new kind of guy," he was describing the star character played by George M. Cohan better than any other words could describe him.

Who is he? Go and make your own guess. We know—but have promised not to reveal the secret. You'll know, too, if you just think straight. It's as plain as the nose on your face.

WARNING SAMARITANS

Joseph Heath, played by Walter Gilbert, finds Parker in the park, feeding the pigeons. Parker tells his story—why he likes pigeons better than people—and Heath takes him home. This ought to be a warning to all Samaritans, because Heath's troubles begin at once. When his friend, Franklyn Chase—our own Paul McGrath—comes upon the scene, the troubles multiply.

George M. Cohan is on the stage almost uninterruptedly for over two hours. It is one of the most perfectly sustained and most admirably varied comedy roles any actor has ever put across. It is acting, comedy, true to the grand old tradition of Nat Goodwin, Joe Jefferson and their peers. It is as natural as a tin cup of water and as exhilarating as a Bronx cocktail—no, a Manhattan! The audience laughed and laughed and laughed. And they are still guessing who Parker was. Still guessing—when it's so easy!

Some may think Parker was an escaped lunatic. Some may think he was a criminal at large. Some may think it was Bernard Shaw, but he never was in the park—some may think it was Al Smith, but his brown hat is a derby—some may think it was George M. Cohan himself, but that would be too obvious.

IT'S VERY SHAVIAN

If it was Cohan, he got Shaw to write the play for him. There are lines like "Every man his own mob!" that would serve as evidence. In fact, all those long speeches made before the final curtain, in which Parker tells just what he thinks about everything and everybody, point strongly to Shaw. He let's Parker make out a very good case against the insanity of the world—just as Shakespeare did: "A mad world, my masters!"

It is one of the most amusing evenings the theater has provided during the entire season. The quiet and mature art of George M. Cohan runs the complete gamut of all his capabilities. He even does a song and dance—and it fits into the action perfectly. It is rare and rich comedy, with flavor and unction and gusto and everything else. And the simple setting, as elemental as the drawing-room of a Moliere comedy, fades into invisibility as you watch the players—a round dozen of them—all entering completely into the spirit of the farce, which shows "a comic state of mind in continuous action."

Yes, it's a rare comedy and a mystery play so transparent that no one will ever guess. And we won't tell.

'Peg' Coming Forth as Movie

Upon the twenty-first anniversary of its debut in the theater, "Peg O' My Heart" finds itself still going strong in popularity and being filmed as a talking picture by Cosmopolitan Productions for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with Marion Davies in the title role.

Having broken all stage records, translated and played in every tongue in the civilized world, "Peg" is said to have been presented to a greater collective audience than any work in the history of the theater. The anniversary of the famous play is recalled by Robert Z. Leonard, noted film director, who is filming the new "Peg."

Leonard, oddly enough, played in the first presentation of "Peg O' My Heart," appearing in support of Laurette Taylor in the role of Jarvis, the comedy butler. He also was assistant stage director.

PLAYING AS GUEST

"The first time 'Peg' was played on the stage was in the spring of 1913, in the old Burbank Theater in Los Angeles," Leonard relates. "At that time, Miss Taylor was visiting the guest star of the Morosco Stock Company. Her husband, J. Hartley Manners, arrived from England with the script of a new play under his arm.

"While we were rehearsing another play, Miss Taylor read 'Peg O' My Heart.' Her delight with it made us put it on instead of the piece in rehearsal. I was not supposed to play in it but at the last minute Charles Giblyn, later a film director and now acting in pictures again, sprained his ankle. I took his place in the act as Jarvis.

AN INSTANT HIT

"The play was an instant hit. It played for ten solid weeks in the stock company in the Burbank — something unheard of in those days."

A few months later, the Manners play was taken to Broadway. It opened at the Cort Theater in November, 1912, and ran for 600 consecutive performances. After playing it around the United States, Miss Taylor took "Peg" to London, where she opened in October, 1914, in the Comedy Theater, breaking the previous New York record by playing 710 performances. She returned to London with the play several years later and duplicated its success.

STILL IN DEMAND

"'Peg' has been played all over the world," Leonard recalls. "It has been most interesting to follow its history. I am told that royalties still pour in for rights to the play from all parts of the globe.

"As a talking picture I think 'Peg' will be even more popular, particularly with Miss Davies as 'Peg.' It is the type of picture that everyone is waiting to see nowadays. It has all the sweet, old-fashioned romance with the hoydenish comedy we need today."

Del Rio Gets An Exotic Story

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, May 9.—Reaching into its story coffers, RKO will give Dolores Del Rio the lead in "Green Mansions."

Just when the picture will be made is not certain. Merian C. Cooper has promised the Mexican actress a sophisticated role in her next film.

But when they do get around to producing the W. H. Hudson novel, it is fairly certain that Dolores will have Joel McCrea as her leading man. The two were immensely popular in "The Bird of Paradise," and here again is a story of love against a background of tropic wilderness.

Whether a motion picture can capture the haunting beauty of Hudson's novel remains to be seen. With a little overemphasis, the girl of the forest can become a female Tarzan. But Cooper hopes to preserve the delicate texture of the romance.

He believes he'll have a box-office hit comparable to the Hawaiian tragedy.

* * *

In this picture, Lee Tracey plays an actor's agent and John Barrymore his client. The two have a scene where Tracy tears into Barrymore, calling him every kind of a rotten actor. At the first rehearsal, Barrymore answered the tirade with a chuckle.

"What's the matter?" asked Tracy.

"Nothing, Lee," said Barrymore. "Only I was just thinking that those lines sound faintly biographical."

If you can believe report, not only Mary Pickford and Harry Cohn, but Paramount as well, are considering versions of "Alice in Wonderland." The Lewis Carroll satire is in public domain in this country, but the rights are still protected in England. It was for these rights that Paramount was negotiating.

* * *

Diana Wynyard's return to her native land was a triumph. Out of the 20 reporters who met the Empress of Britain, writes Jerry Horwin, 18 had come specifically to interview the heroine of "Cavalcade." This picture is a smash hit over there. Other American films rating high are "King Kong" and "The Kid From Spain."

After all these years, the Malibu film residents are being allowed to buy the land upon which their beach cottages are erected. Originally they signed a 10-year lease and then were given a chance to renew. Those who have bought a permanent title to their land include Bob Leonard, Buddy De Sylva and Tod Browning . . . And, speaking of homes, Mary Brian is building a new one at Tolucca Lake . . . That was Sandra Shaw with whom Gary Cooper was sitting tete-a-tete at the Cocoanut Grove . . . And George O'Brien's new leading woman, Claire Trevor, is having steady dates with Ivan Lebedeff. He used to haunt the Hollywood Plaza when she was out here several months ago.

Desiring to introduce Wieck to the Hollywood press, Paramount gave a luncheon party at the Roosevelt. As usual, someone asked the actress how she likes Hollywood. A little wistfully, perhaps, she said it was too early to tell, that she has scarcely seen anybody but newspaper people.

For one who has had only 38 English lessons, Miss Wieck shows a remarkable command of the language. Her vocabulary is sometimes lacking but her pronunciation is perfect.

Did you know: That Robert Montgomery owns a 100-acre farm in Massachusetts, where he likes to spend his vacations?

All in a Day

BY MARK HELLINGER

The Tragedy of Elvira.

IF A WRITER wants to get into trouble, the easiest way to do it is to start a story with the statement that woman is a funny creature. All women resent that sort of crack. They want to know by what right the author is qualified to judge. They want to know why any woman is funnier than any man. They want to know so many things. All of which makes it bad business to start a yarn by saying that woman is a funny creature.

Well, woman is a funny creature. Give her a blue dress and she's sorry its not green. Buy a house in the country and she wants an apartment in the city. Purchase a roadster and she'll tell you a sedan is better. Slip her a bracelet and she wishes it were a brooch.

If you are thin, she insists that you eat as much as possible. And if you're stout, she tells you you're looking sloppy. If you go out, she says she's lonesome without you. And if you're with her too much, she gets bored. If you pay $1 for a $5 article, she says you've been robbed. And if she spends $2 taxi fare in order to buy a $1 turnip peeler for 99 cents, she insists she's bought a bargain.

I could go on along those lines for several years, but the hour is growing late and I suppose I've done sufficient damage already. So we'll simply let the matter rest and call the whole thing an introduction to the sad story of Elvira Evans.

As Mrs. Guy Irvine can tell you, Elvira was born with two strikes on her, two out in the ninth and the other side leading by the score of 25 to 0. Because nature played her a dirty trick. And as she grew older, nature refused to call the hand a misdeal.

She was as homely as a battered taxi. Her face looked like a cross between an ant-eater and a telephone. She was tall, lean, lanky and lofty. One eye gazed south, while the other went northeast.

Her hair was a combination of yellow and red, and the entire effect looked just a trifle mouldy. Her teeth protruded, except in those spots in the front where there were no teeth left to protrude. She had an impediment in her speech and she didn't hear quite so well as she should.

She didn't remember her parents. Which made everything even, because her parents didn't want to remember her. At the age of 30, she was still trying to find her proper groove in life.

You don't need me to tell you that life was a tough struggle for Elvira. Half the time, she didn't eat. And when she did eat, she couldn't enjoy herself because she would worry about where the next meal was coming from. Men always gave her the go-by.

When she reached the age of 30, she hit out for a small town in upper New York. Maybe, she felt, she would find happiness among the birds, the bees, the flowers and the trees.

Strangely enough, Elvira found a job in that small town. She hadn't been there more than five months when Farmer Burbridge hired her to take care of his place. She was to be a servant. She had to rise at 5, cook the meals, clean the house, scrub the floors, fetch the water, milk the cows, feed the dogs and help out with the farming in her spare time. For this she received $20 a month—out of which Farmer Burbridge kept $19 in his bank under his name in order to teach her to save.

It will be hard for you to believe—but Elvira wasn't very happy. Every time she passed a mirror she burst into tears. And Farmer Burbridge was no help to her at all. Why, that man was so close that every time he killed a goose he kept the tail feathers on the chance that quill pens might come back!

There wasn't a soul in town who gave a thought to Elvira. Those who bothered to notice her at all, went home and enjoyed a good laugh. She had no boy friends and she had no girl friends.

She longed for some one to love her. Some one to whom she could tell her troubles. Some one who would understand her! If she only had a sister! Or a brother! Or an uncle! Or even a father-in-law! But no. It was not to be . . .

At the age of thirty-eight Elvira made up her mind to end it all. She wasn't getting anywhere—and the longer she lived the less chance she had of getting there. So, as she daydreamed while milking a cow one day, she decided that suicide was the only way out.

But how? Ah, that was the question! Gas would be quite effective—but if she used too much gas the cost would break Farmer Burbridge's heart. And there was no use doing that. A revolver would do the trick very nicely, but there wasn't a revolver in the house. It was all very perplexing.

The following day she was still day-dreaming by the side of the same cow—when the answer finally struck her. Why not the railroad track? Why not, indeed?

No sooner thought of than acted upon. That night, when everyone had retired, Elvira dug out her new dress. It was a very nice dress. Made of blue taffeta, with ruffles, and everything. It had cost her $3 at a sale, and it was her most prized possession.

She put on the dress, powdered her nose and even went so far as to put a little rouge on her cheeks. When they found her they would at least know that she had died when she looked her best . . .

Elvira walked through the main section of the town and out through a country lane. The train whistled in the distance and Elvira hastened her steps. She entered Farmer Blair's pasture, which was near the tracks.

Suddenly she stopped short. To her surprise and dismay, she saw that old Nick Blair had erected a new fence. And Farmer Blair had done a thorough job. The fence was of barbed wire.

The train whistled again. The railroad track was some 20 feet ahead, on the other side of the fence. With a sigh, Elvira threw up her hands in a gesture of despair. Wearily, she retraced her steps. And back she went to Farmer Burbridge's.

Was it a case of cold feet? Did she think she might finally meet the right man on the way back? No, indeed. I told you woman was a funny creature. She was afraid she would tear her dress on that barbed wire fence! . . .

25TH BIRTHDAY TO BE MARKED BY CHURCH

St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Congregation of Ambridge, which worships in the quaint century-old church of the Harmony Society at Economy, will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of its founding Sunday.

At the same time the Great House of the Harmony Society, which stands across the street from the church, and is maintained as a public museum by the State Historical Commission, will be reopened for the summer.

Simultaneously, also, a new museum of Harmony Society relics will be opened in the old Music Hall.

The Harmony Society, a religious community of Swabian Nonconformists, came to the United States under the leadership of George Rapp in 1804.

SOCIETY PASSES

Few converts were made, the members grew old and died, and the society passed out of existence.

In 1908 several employes of the society, in co-operation with other persons who had come to live in Economy after the establishment of the American Bridge Company's works at the neighboring village of Ambridge, organized St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church and arranged to use the Harmony Society's house of worship.

The present pastor is the Rev. L. L. Haseley. He will be assisted in the morning services, at 10:30 o'clock, by the Rev. Walter E. Schuette, of Sewickley, and in the afternoon services, at 2:30, by the Rev. F. L. Poulson, of Coraopolis. The morning services will be in German, and the afternoon services in English. In the evening there will be a reunion of those confirmed in the church. The Economy band will play.

HISTORICAL CHURCH

During their terms as leaders of the Harmony Society, George Rapp, Romulus L. Baker, Jacob Henrici (a former president of the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad), Jonathan Lenz and John S. Duss, who achieved distinction as a band leader and composer, all preached in this church.

Mr. Duss, the last survivor of this group, who now spends the winters at New Smyrna, Fla., is expected to be in Economy Sunday.

Recital Scheduled Before Beaver Club

Miss Reader

Merran E. Reader, dramatic soprano, of New York, will give a musical recital before the Beaver Woman's Club, at the home of E. S. H. McCauley, Beaver, Friday afternoon. Among her selections will be Ritornia Vincitor," from Verdi's Aida, and songs from Strauss, Liszt, Massanet and Hughes. Gertrude Mohr will be accompanist.

Judge to Address Rotary Club Women

Judge Sara M. Soffel will speak at a Mother's Day program before the weekly luncheon meeting tomorrow of the Rotary Club of Pittsburgh in the Fort Pitt Hotel. Wives and mothers of members will be guests.

Malone Entry Confuses Mayoralty Fight

—By MARK SHIELDS—

James F. Malone, in announcing himself as a candidate for the Republican Mayoralty nomination, acted without consulting those independent or anti-Herron groups who were desirous of a conference which would determine the most available man to pit against Mayor John S. Herron in a hand-to-hand battle for the nomination.

Mr. Shields

These groups wanted a two-man fight, rightly figuring that thus lay the strongest attack upon the Mayor and the following of Senator James J. Coyne. They desired that mutual advantage should be supreme over individual ambition.

Mr. Malone, if he remains in the race, has upset this idea, though he has not apparently balked the conference plan of hitting upon another candidate. There is no evidence whatever that the Malone candidacy has been enthusiastically received by the anti-Herron elements, or that he even has received three rousing cheers from some of those who most strongly supported him in his defeat against former Mayor Charles H. Kline in 1929.

Indeed, the pleasure with which the Herron and Coyne contingent openly views the entry of Mr. Malone presupposes a three-man fight if he remains in, a conviction that he will not be accepted by those who for months have been planning a contest.

That is one view of their attitude. Another is that their relish for a three-man fight is something of a confession of weakness in a battle against one strong man.

In making his announcement as he did this year, Mr. Malone was reminiscent of four years ago, when he, Kline and the late Judge Richard W. Martin were the contestants, Kline winning because the opposition vote was split.

* * *

Reported Desirous of Anticipating McArdle

In that campaign Malone anticipated Martin.

In this he is reported to have been desirous of anticipating Councilman P. J. McArdle, whose friends have been urging him to announce for the Mayoralty. One report is that Malone had heard McArdle intended to announce last Sunday, so beat him to the starting point. McArdle did not announce, though his friends are continuing to work earnestly in his behalf.

So far as can be learned, Mr. Malone gave advance notice to none of the men most closely associated with him in the 1929 race that he intended another adventure in public life at this time. His campaign manager of four years ago, the spearhead of his speakers' brigade and men of equal value in his previous foray were somewhat surprised.

Nor is there evidence that Mr. Malone has solicited their assistance. It is reported that he has kept copies of the speeches they made in his behalf in fighting Kline and Judge Martin, and might cite their changed attitude should they fight him now.

This is merely report, but it is interesting in view of the fact that Mr. Malone's campaign manager in 1929 was Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell, who has been prominently mentioned as a potential candidate for this year.

It is possible that Mr. Malone has reservoirs of strength of which no one knows. It is more than probable that he had hopes for unified support of the independent elements. He has had a long career in public life, and has been a hard and resourceful fighter, and seldom has leaped in the dark.

Frankly, however, there is nothing on which to base a belief now that he has or will have a complete coalition of anti-Herron elements.

* * *

Soldier Vote Still Hunts Candidate

Some of Mr. Malone's former associates, who suffered for their support of him in 1929, believe he did not show a proper sense of gratitude when he broke with Commissioner Charles C. McGovern in the 1931 county primary, lost his place in the Pinchot cabinet as a result, and so surrendered the opportunity to help through state patronage many who had stuck with him through defeat.

What of the independent groups which have followed McGovern? Malone could hardly expect help there.

Judges Ralph H. Smith and Benjamin Lencher have received Pinchot appointments. Both were for Malone with all the force of their vocal cords in 1929. In view of the happenings of 1931 and since, they hardly would be now.

As to the soldier vote, which is reported to be adamant against Herron, there are well-founded reports that it will not be for Malone willingly, and still hunts a candidate. Some soldier leaders are not pleased with the manner in which Mr. Malone barged to the front without consultation.

From any standpoint, the Malone entry has confused rather than clarified the impending Mayoralty campaign. If Malone stays in there will almost certainly be a three-handed battle, exactly what the Herron forces have desired, and what his opponents had hoped to avert.

Evelyn Tells How Thaw Planned European Trip; Calls Paris 'Paradise'

SYNOPSIS

Although Evelyn tells of the gay Broadway parties, of the momentary adoration of stage beauties at the turn of the century, through this and the other installments of her life story runs the plaint, "Oh, if I only had" or "Oh, if I only had not." Previously she has told of her courtship by Stanford White, of her meeting Harry Thaw, of her parts in shows. She has told how White was her "great love," how she distrusted Thaw. She has written to of a weird experience in a castle in the Tyrol. She said in her introduction, "you can't break the rules and win." She goes on to prove it.

By EVELYN NESBIT THAW
(Copyright.)

CHAPTER V.

During the time that Harry Thaw was calling on me at the hospital I was still "Miss Nesbit" to him. He was always on his best behavior—putting his best foot forward, as the saying goes—and I began to think that the stories about his wild parties were newspaper exaggerations.

I spoke to him about it once and he said the stories were "a lot of lies;" that if he gave a party, especially a theatrical party, and gave the women beautiful souvenirs, the newspapers always "blew up" the value of the presents and made mountains out of molehills. He was always sober and well-behaved.

No Desire to Marry

Gradually I lost my fear of him and my instinctive dislike. But, as I said before, marriage was the last thing in my mind. I had no desire to marry and none of the usual ambition that a girl is supposed to have—especially a girl on the stage—to marry a rich man.

Anyone who knows me well knows that I never have been mercenary; that money has never meant anything to me. It is to me merely a means to an end, and that's the truth. I would never have returned to the stage if I hadn't needed money badly.

Then, a very peculiar incident occured. When I left the hospital I went to live with my mother at the Algonquin Hotel, so weak I could scarceely walk. Stanford White gave a supper party for me, to celebrate my recovery, at the Tower. To this party came young Jimmy Barney, the son of James Barney, the Wall street magnate, who later committed suicide because of financial losses.

Crossed Wires

Young Barney belonged to the Racquet Club crowd and I had met him before. He asked me if I was Stanford White's sweetheart, to which I replied, "No." Then he asked me if I would go out to supper with him some night. I said "Yes."

What does he do but ask Stanford White if he can borrow the Tower some evening! Of couse, Stanford White said "Yes," and gave him the keys. They arranged for a definite time. Barney said nothing to me about it. He simply went ahead with the arrangements, told me that we would go to dinner, see a show and then have supper together.

On the afternoon of that particular day, Barney sent me a box of flowers and a jeweled brooch by a special Racquet Club messenger. Late that same afternoon, Stanford White called at the Algonquin. Said he:

"We're having supper tonight. But we can't go to the Tower. I have loaned it to a friend, so we will go to the Twenty-fourth street place."

"Oh," I said, "I'm sorry, but I have already made an engagement for tonight."

A RARE PICTURE, 30 YEARS OLD, OF MRS. E. F. NESBIT HOLMAN

LAUNCH DRIVE FOR BETTER PROGRAMS

Quin Hall's 'Junior' Cartoons Urged as Aid to Pupils

Representatives of the Pittsburgh Parent-Teachers' Association today agreed the remedy for objectionable radio programs for children was in writing letters of protest, conttaining specific objections.

This attitude was expressed by a number of speakers and concurred in by an audience of parents and educators today in the Board of Education Administration Building.

Miss Jane White, assistant curator of education at Carnegie Museum and director of station WCAE's children's programs, told the audience of her attempts to make programs for the children useful as well as entertaining, and how she eliminated the objectionable features.

Gradually the programs were made by and for school children, with children acting.

EDUCATIONAL CARTOONS

She told of a new venture, wherein the Sun-Telegraph's cartoonist, Quin Hall, starting tomorrow, will introduce botany and kindred studies into his daily cartoon strip, the Junior Patrol. It will work in with the scientific studies for children conducted on WCAE.

Miss Margery Stewart, critic for station KDKA in its earlier days and one of those to establish the first children's broadcast in the nation, urged the parents to write their objections to the sponsors of children's program. She praised WCAE programs, Damrosch, Singing Lady, Great Moments in History, Angelo Patri and others, and said:

"The sponsors want to know not so much what you like. Praise is good, but constructive criticism is better, they feel. They want to do what they can to lift up radio and at teh same time entertain the greatest majority."

Dr. Will Earhart, director of music in the public schools, told of the value of good programs in the school rooms, and declared that each room would have a radio if the Board of Education could afford to install the instruments. He recommended the Walter Damrosch program for its musical values, and added:

"Good taste in children is inherent. They like a rose and a rainbow more than they do an old tomato can. It's the atmosphere with which we surround them, the impressions that we make on them that leads them this way or that."

CENSORSHIP PROPOSED

Dr. D. R. Sumstine spoke of the movies, comic strips and radio as the three great influences out of school. He suggested censorship of children's radio programs by competent educators to guide the tastes of youngsters along higher lines.

Herbert Spencer, principal of Frick Training School, led the discussion. Dr. R. M. Sherrard, Mrs. William Rosenbloom and others spoke briefly.

A committee was named to inform City Council of resolutions combining the opinions expressed at the meetings. Among those named were Mrs. J. H. Dice, Mrs. Sol Levine, Mrs. H. C. Hedenberg and Dr. A. L. Devers, principal of Taylor Allderdice High School.

COUNTY TO PUSH NADINE WORK

The County Public Works Department will be able to start work within a few weeks on completion of the Allegheny River boulevard after authorization has been received, Director Thomas O. Hasley said today. The grand jury yesterday approved condemnation proceedings necessary to open the bottle neck between the property of two utilities at Nadine.

The Pennsylvania Water Company will have five days to present objections to the grand jury's action. A hearing will be held Wednesday in Common Pleas Court, where the water company has asked an injunction.

HALF OF SANDY FUND RAISED

Additional contributions today increased the "Sandy Fund," that Mrs. Ethel Cannon began to save the dog sentenced to die for biting a 3-year-old Versailles Township boy.

Of the $250 necessary to appeal the case of the dog's owner, Frank Sechan, of Versailles Township, more than $125 has been raised, Mrs. Cannon said.

Sechan is scheduled to be arraigned Monday in Criminal Court for sentence for his failure to dispose of his dog, which was a condition of the six month parole granted by Judge S. L. Reed, of Cambria County. Sechan had pleaded guilty to keeping a ferocious dog.

Believing that Sandy is not a vicious dog, Mrs. Cannon began the fund to defray the expense of an appeal to Superior Court. A bank account, known as the "Sandy Fund," has been opened in the Dollar Savings Bank.

Dr. Cotton, Mental Case Expert, Dies

TRENTON, N. J., May 9.—(AP.)—Dr. Henry A. Cotton, whose development of the theory that mental diseases generally have a physical cause brought him world fame, died of heart disease yesterday. He was 57.

Dr. Cotton was credited with increasing from 37 to 87 per cent the number of cures in insanity cases under his care during 20 years as director of the New Jersey State Hospital.

Ripley Welcomed In Rio de Janiero

RIO DE JANEIRO, May 9.—(INS.)—Robert L. (Believe It or Not) Ripley arrived today and received an enthusiastic welcome.

TWO ARRESTED IN RUM RAIDS

An alleged one-man club at 210 Smithfield street was raided last night by police on orders of Public Safety Director Harmar D. Denny, Jr. Lieut. Albert Florig arrested Lawrence Barker, 43, on a charge of keeping a disorderly house.

Florig testified he caught Barker attempting to pour the contents of 3 five-gallon jugs of moonshine, into a sewer when he broke down the door. He also said he found a slot machine in a cupboard on the third floor. Barker was held over.

John Delmont, 35, of Congress street, was held for court in $2,500 bail accused of keeping a disorderly house. Police testified he was selling "mooney" to four visitors.

Coraopolis Man Wins Speech Tournament

WOOSTER, O., May 9.—(AP.)—R. J. Corbett, of Coraopolis, Pa., was announced today as the winner of the extempore contest for coaches, held last night as a feature of the third annual high school speech tournament.

The Coraopolis debating team also was among six from 17 states that have won their first two debates.

Former Commander Of 'Mayflower' Dies

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP.)—Capt. Robert L. Berry, U. S. Navy, retired, who commanded the presidential yacht Mayflower for three years, died of pneumonia today in the U. S. Navy Hospital in Brooklyn.

Hazelwood Brewery Gets State Permit

HARRISBURG, May 9.—(AP.)—Permits for three breweries were issued today by the State Alcohol Permit Board. They are:

MALTA HOSTS WELCOMED

Burgess William M. Turner, of Wilkinsburg, today welcomed the annual state convention, Knights of Malta, in Malta Temple, South avenue and Coal street. H. C. Lindemuth, of Philadelphia, grand commander, responded.

John G. Miles, former Wilkinsburg burgess, is general chairman of the convention committee. While delegates engaged in a business session, their wives were guests on a sight-seeing trip.

A parade through Wilkinsburg streets will feature tonight's program.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

NEW YORK, May 9.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Mr. Roosevelt made us a mighty fine speech over the radio Sunday night. He spoke our language. "Can't ballyhoo the nation to prosperity," "Nation in a tail-spin," "Can't make a hit every time we come to bat." And in addition to all this, he has the best radio voice in America. Course he just read the minutes of the last meeting, but he did it so nice that we didn't hardly notice that he forgot to mention what might be in his mind for the future.

Roosevelt Gives Pill and Puts No Sugar on It

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

We listened between the words of the President's speech Sunday night over the double web.

Seemed strange to hear a President speaking like a human being. The way we translate it, he is for the diagnosis first and the medicine second.

His delivery was smooth but firmly incorporated. There were no fantastic promises. Neither was there any sugar to lick off before you come to the quinine.

We are not to think that prosperity is back again because the polka dots are larger. You can't grind down facts with sandpaper.

That's what we want to know. We would rather hear the worst than have it sneak up on rubber heels over a carpet of gypsy dream books.

RACING PIGEON FLIES INTO KITCHEN

Woman in Oakland Adopts Strange Dinner Guest

A racing pigeon that unexpectedly flew in a kitchen window of Mrs. Sam Bloomfield, 343 McKee place, today was adopted as a pet.

The left foot of the bird is marked with the numbers and letters AU-33-SC-3899.

The Bloomfields were having dinner when the bird flew onto the window sill and pecked against the glass. It was exhausted and hungry. Mrs. Bloomfield said:

"We have no idea where the pigeon came from. We took it in the house and fed it and gave it a box to sleep in. It is very tame and likes being here."

Some of the neighbors contend that the pet is a carrier and not a racing pigeon. Efforts to find the owner of the pigeon have been of no avail.

Mexico Ends Exile For Carranza Rebel

MEXICO CITY, May 9.—(AP.)—President Rodriguez has approved amnesty for Jose Maria Maytorena, ex-governor of Sonora, who has been exiled for 18 years in Los Angeles. The President passed the matter to the Interior Department with the probability that Maytorena will be advised shortly that he may return to Mexico. He was involved in the Carranza revolution.

Safecracker Trapped In Office, Two Flee

After police of the Forty-third Street Police Station had surrounded the Pittsburgh Banana Company at Twenty-first and Pike streets early today, John Marino, 28, described by police as a New York safecracker, was arrested. Two companions of Marino, police said, escaped.

The office had been ransacked and the safe broken open, according to police, who said valuable papers had been taken.

Police were called by Pennsylvania Railroad detectives who said they heard suspicious noises in the place.

Marino attempted to escape by jumping from a rear platform to the railroad tracks. He suffered lacerations and was treated at West Penn Hospital.

MY OWN LIFE STORY

Stanford White. "Get out of it somehow?"

"Not very well," I answered. "I have promised to dine, go to a show and have supper with Jimmy Barney."

"What!" exclaimed White. "Not Jimmy Barney?"

"Yes," I said. "Why?"

"Why?" he exploded. "I gave him the keys for the Tower for tonight. So you are the girl he's taking to the Tower! Oh! Oh!"

I was flabbergasted. What a situation!

Stanford White called Barney on the telephone and tactfully rearranged Barney's evening for him.

"After you and Evelyn see the show," he said, "we might as well all have supper together, and I will ask another girl."

Jimmy Barney was heart-broken because he was sailing for Paris next morning to study architecture at the Beaux Arts. When I met him again it was under tragic circumstances.

Dr. Potter advised my mother to take me to the mountains during my convalescence, or, he said:

"A sea voyage would be ideal. Evelyn must be kept off her feet. No dancing. No theatrical work. And she must not even walk up and down stairs for at least six months. She must not lift any heavy objects or strain herself in any way."

Let me explain to you here what my feelings were toward Stanford White at this time. I still failed to understand his giving presents to other girls or sending them flowers. This unreasonable jealousy on my part had ended our love affair. My long absence at the school had given me time to think a little on the subject. I had decided to put love out of my life and devote myself to study.

This enforced idleness, the convalescent period, annoyed me no end, but it was absolutely necessary for me to rest and regain my health and strength.

The Trip to Europe

All this time Harry Thaw had been doing his utmost to establish himself in the good graces of my mother and myself. He suggested a trip to Europe; said that he would go over to the other side in advance and leave his English valet, Bedford, to arrange for our boat accommodations; that we could visit London and Paris; that I could be with my mother; that I would be perfectly safe and that we would not have to worry about expenses. He would take care of all that.

I was dying to see Paris. We talked it over for a long time, my mother and I, unable to make up our minds whether to accept the invitation or not. Thaw's reputation worried my mother a lot. But I was crazy to go to Europe and could see no harm in going.

"What difference does it make, mama?" I said. "We can stay in Europe until I am well again. Then we can come back to New York and I can get a job in some show."

So it was finally decided and one lovely day—I think it was in May—we sailed on the S. S. New York.

Before we left, Stanford White gave me a letter of credit for $500. This letter of credit later caused me a great deal of trouble.

We landed at Folkestone, if I remember correctly, where I had a quarrel with my mother which, when it was brought up at the Thaw trial later, was horribly mangled and distorted.

It was in the hotel at Folkestone where we were staying while awaiting the Channel boat to take us to France the next day. I suddenly decided to give myself a shampoo. My mother was taking a nap. Being very weak, as I said before, I couldn't lift the heavy pitcher of hot water, and woke my mother, asking her to lift it for me.

Half asleep, she said, impatiently:

"Instead of sending a valet over here with us, Thaw should have gotten you a maid."

An Apartment in Paris

When we arrived in Paris a situation arose, causing endless quarrels between my mother and myself. Instead of taking us to a hotel, Thaw had rented an apartment in the Rue Matignon.

The apartment was divided into two sections by a large ornate salon furnished in the familiar Louis Quatroze period. At one end lived Thaw and his valet—in rooms next to the kitchen and bath. At the other end were my mother and myself in two rooms separated by another bathroom.

My mother did not approve of this arrangement. She thought that we should be living in a hotel by ourselves—not so near Thaw. She said it didn't look right. It worried her and was a constant and continual bone of contention between us.

I could see no reason for all this fuss. I was weak and ill, in no condition for either romancing or quarreling.

Oh! What a thrill Paris was! The restaurants! The divine food! The beauty of the city! Its delightful atmosphere! The Champs Elysees, the Bois de Boulogne, the Louvre, the great works of art!

I stood spellbound before the Venus of Milo, the Winged Victory which incidentally, was Stanford White's favorite work of art. He always said that the Winged Victory transcended all other sculptures; that nothing compared with it in majesty and beauty. One thing he did for me for which I have always been grateful, was to help develop my natural love of beauty. He guided my artistic tastes in the right direction.

I saw Mona Lisa. And I spent a whole day in that section of the Louvre housing the Barbizon School.

Dining in Paradise!

Paris was Paradise to me! I loved it! And, by the way, Paris is primarily a woman's city.

Food has always been an important item in my life. They say there are few women gourmets, but there is no doubt about the fact that I am one. My favorite restaurants at that time were Voisin; La Perouse, famous for its sea food; Bouillabaisse; the Petit Pollard on the Boulevard; the Marguery, for its filet of sole; Laurent, and a few others. I would study the menus and fuss for half an hour over what I was going to eat. I had the culinary tastes of a rich old man.

In Paris I soon became of great interest because of Harry Thaw and extreme youth. They called me "La Bebe." To say that Thaw was jealous of me is putting it mildly. Even if I went to the ladies' room at the Cafe de Paris, for instance, or at the races, he would stand at the entrance; hand the usual old woman attendant a generous tip to attend me and see that no one—no strange woman even—spoke to me. This always amused me. I never could understand such unusual precautions.

For some strange reason he always resented a waiter's attempt to brush crumbs off the tablecloth. Unless a waiter was familiar with Thaw's peculiar ideas on this subject, it was inevitable that he should cause Thaw's displeasure by brushing off a table before serving coffee and dessert. Thaw would fly into a fury; sometimes jerk the tablecloth and whatever dishes happened to be upon it to the floor.

"Imbecile!" He would shriek. "Arrete! Arrete!"

Then, if he thought some one was looking too much at me there would be another rumpus. He would suddenly make a mad dash for the unfortunate man and start a fight. But if the man put up a fight, that would stop Thaw immediately. All a man would have to do would be to stand back and square his fists and Thaw would immediately want to shake hands with him.

A Soap Barrage

I often felt sorry for his valet, Bedford. If he did the slightest thing to displease Thaw, the latter flew into an ungovernable rage and threw things in every direction.

Once in Paris my mother happened to walk through the hallway into the salon. Bedford had moved a dish of fruit in cleaning the room. For some reason that infuriated Thaw. A package of soap had arrived that morning from the perfumer's. Thaw seized the cakes of soap and hurled them at his unfortunate valet. Bedford ducked. From long practice he had become quite adept at ducking. The soap flew through the air and out into the hallway, just escaping my mother's head.

"What was that?" she asked, going into the room. "What flew past my head?"

Thaw, in his lounging robe and slippers, indulging in one of these rages, frightened her terribly. He ran about the room hurling cakes of soap in every direction.

Then he would sit, biting his nails for interminable periods, staring into space.

I was slowly but surely regaining my health and strength. I began to realize there was something the matter with Harry Thaw, but you must remember, I was a very young person.

I knew nothing about subtle symptoms, nothing about insanity. I didn't recognize these symptoms as being dangerous.

Thaw had a peculiar walk—sort of rapid tearing along on the tips of his toes. Later I learned, when I began to study the subject—from the now forgotten Maudsley to Krafft-Ebing—that one of the first things a practiced and experienced alienist looks for in his patient is his walk. All mentally unbalanced people possess a peculiar walk.

Thaw had other eccentricities about which I was to learn, to my sorrow, later.

A tourist, who refused to reveal his name, told Detective Sergt. John O'Connor early today that he had encountered three men in an automobile loaded with machine guns and smaller weapons. He said he had seen the men as he was stopped in a service station at Bellville, near Lewiston, for repairs. State police were notified.

COAL MEN TOLD OF MARKET LOSSES

Competitive fuels cost the coal industry 125,000,000 tons "while operators rested in a false security, delegates to the coal division convention of the American Mining Congress today were told by B. R. Gebhart, public relation director, Illinois Coal Bureau.

Principal loss of business was laid to developments of the oil and gas burners. Condemning the coal man's early attitude that oil cost was too high and gas pipe lines too costly, Mr. Gebhart said:

"These notions in the past have lulled coal men into a false security and have resulted in a national loss in annual coal production of something in the neighborhood of 124,000,000 tons. During the past 10 years, extensive research have developed oil and gas burners and methods of their application. The coal man's chief interest was in efficient production while he neglected the application of coal in the hands of the consumer."

The speaker advocated cooperation with the laboratory to develop a stoker to overcome the industry's loss of leadership. He cited a newspaper advertising campaign by Chicago coal men to educate the consumer that coal heat costs one-half that of oil and one-third that of gas. The campaign, he said, has resulted in the use of fewer oil burners per capita in Chicago than in any other city of 100,000 population or over.

Discussions on newest mechanical developments in mining occupied both sessions today in Hotel William Penn. The largest registration since 1929 for one day was reached with 585 delegates present yesterday. Local mines today were being represented by superintendents and foremen.

RELIEF from Neuralgia

No known medicine works quite like Bayer Aspirin for the awful head and face pains of neuralgia. The tablets made by the Bayer process have a peculiar efficacy in relieving neuritic pain. This has been demonstrated again and again.

The speed of Bayer Aspirin tablets makes them invaluable in cases of severe suffering. They are always safe; doctors endorse their general use for neuralgia, neuritis, headaches, periodic pains, and other discomfort. Their speedy relief of almost any pain is due to the speed with which these tablets dissolve. There are no harmful ingredients; nothing to depress the heart.

Genuine Bayer Aspirin is safe, uniform, dependable; never hesitate to take it when any sudden ache or pain or cold threatens your comfort.

The show ring of the Allegheny Country Club, on Sewickley Heights, isn't going to be deserted this summer after all even if the Allegheny Country Club horse show, that thrilling three-day event, has been cancelled for this year.

For there's going to be a Sewickley Gymkhana Show there Saturday, June 17. It's to be an informal affair, including many classes for children such as jumping, musical stalls, egg and spoon race and potato race and other stunts.

And the date is set later than the horse show so that the younger crowd will be home from school.

The show isn't to be limited to children's classes, I want to add—there are to be a number of saddle horse and amateur hunter classes.

And the Gymkhana, like the horse shows, will be open to the public.

There were no meetings of the smart set in the lobby at the Nixon last night for George Cohan's "Pigeons and People" for there was no intermission. So the only opportunity for a bit of chat and a cigaret was while waiting for one's car after the performance, which, by the way, is the grandest tossing of words in many a week.

Seen at Theater

The John W. Lawrences, always faithful first-nighters, were there with Mrs. Lawrence in black. Others I had a glimpse of were the F. I. Merricks with Mrs. Merrick in black crepe and beige lace, the Oliver Kellers and Mrs. George Crawford.

I also saw Mrs. Charles Flaccus, another faithful theater patron, and Mrs. Frederick Gwinner III.

Lovers of rock gardens may see some most attractive ones if they wish this week-end down in Sewickley, noted for its lovely gardens and landscaping effects.

To Open Gardens

The gardens will be open on Saturday and Sunday from 3 to 7 o'clock to the public with the small admission fee to be used by the social service department of the Allegheny General Hospital in its work.

Last summer for the first time the gardens were open to the public. And the whole project was so successful that the social service committee, made up of Sewickley society women, has decided to repeat it this year.

The garden week-ends are being started earlier this year, Mrs. B. F. Jones III, the chairman, tells me, because so many of the rock gardens are at their loveliest just now.

The gardens open this week are those of Mrs. Maitland Alexander, Country Club road, Sewickley Heights; Mrs. W. C. Robinson, Blackburn road, Sewickley Heights; Mrs. B. F. Jones, Jr., Blackburn road, Sewickley Heights; Mrs. Henry B. Rea, Country Club road, Sewickley Heights; Mrs. John Oliver, Woodland and Way's Hollow roads; Mrs. S. G. Cooper, of Beaver road; Mrs. Edward Woods, Woodland road and Academy avenue; Mrs. James B. Oliver, of Shields, Pa.; Mrs. William J. Crittenden, end of Woodland road, and Mrs. Alexander Laughlin, Beaver road.

Open This Week-end

For further aid of visitors, every garden open will have a green flag at the gate. The social service department at Allegheny General Hospital has a list of the gardens open, by the way, and Mrs. B. F. Jones, III, of Sewickley, has the same information.

After the opening Saturday and Sunday, there'll be a skip of two weeks to the next garden week-end, Saturday and Sunday, May 27 and 28.

Gardens to be open on those days are those of Mrs. Charles A. Painter, Jr.; Miss Eleanor Chalfant; Mrs. Lewis A. Park, Mrs. William R. Blair, Mrs. J. Frederic Byers, Mrs. Ralph Dravo, Mrs. W. L. Jones, Jr., Mrs. J. B. Orr, Mrs. Halsey Williams and Mrs. A. J. Barron.

May 27-28 Displays

On June 10 and 11 the gardens to be open are those of Mrs. H. H. Robinson, Mrs. Harry Darlington, Mrs. H. N. Van Voorhis, Mrs. Robert Milligan, Mrs. F. R. Dravo, Mrs. Henry Oliver, John Slack, Mrs. George Clapp, Mrs. W. A. Galbraith, Mrs. F. F. Brooks and Mrs. J. G. Pontefract.

For Saturday 24 and 25 the gardens to be viewed are those of Mrs. T. A. McGinley, Mrs. B. F. Jones, Jr., Mrs. B. R. B. Townsend, Mrs. H. Lee Mason, Jr., Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., Mrs. A. H. Hunter, Mrs. B. F. Jones III, Mrs. Wilson A. Campbell, Mrs. H. B. Higgins and Mrs. William Walker.

Aiding Mrs. Jones in arranging these garden week-ends are Mrs. Alexander Laughlin Robinson, Mrs. D. M. Gilmore, Mrs. T. A. McGinley, and Mrs. B. R. B. Townsend.

Congress Observes First Decade in Club House With Pageant, Tea

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Celebrating the first decade in its own home was made an especially auspicious occasion by the Congress of Clubs yesterday. Mrs. May T. Neff had written a pageant in which the past presidents, Miss Helen Grimes, Mrs. John S. Sloan, Mrs. Carl E. Coslowsky and Mrs. Ralph W. Johnston; the president, Mrs. T. M. Stahlman and other Congress members figured, and in which music had a part.

Elsie Breese Mitchell sang "Memories," for which she had written appropriate words; the South Hills String Quintet played, and Norman O'Hara contributed several tenor solos, accompanied by Beulah Taylor Marsten.

Mrs. R. T. Alexander was the herald in the pageant, which the author has termed "A Real Drama in Talking Pictures—A Dream Come True." Mrs. James C. Mace and Mrs. James Sprague also had speaking parts. An elaborate background of forsythia sprays and greenery was used for "the pictures," which were "framed" in flower-decorated velvet curtains. Mrs. Ross J. Thomas and Mrs. H. F. Wahr, as pages, unrolled the scroll of the years.

Coming as an added bit of interest was the presentation of Mrs. Johnston's and Mrs. Coslowsky's photographs (the latter a gift of Charlotte Finley) for the Congress "presidential stairway."

And then there was the much-talked-of pastel tea, in which decorations, refreshments and all other details were carried out in delicate pastel shades. A birthday cake in the center of the long oval tea table held 10 pastel candles, and there were dozens of pastel tapers here, there and everywhere.

Dr. Mary Riggs Noble, of the pre-school division, State Department of Health, is speaking before the Child Health Association at its luncheon meeting in Kaufmann's today.

She is discussing current events in pre-school child health work and an open forum with questions is following her talk. Dr. Noble is making the association a deferred visit, having been unable to keep her engagement in March.

Child Health Day reports will be given and an outline of pre-school examination plans will be made. This is the association's last program meeting until fall, the business meeting taking place in June.

THIS YEAR'S SPORTS CLOTHES BECOME HIGHLY SPECIALIZED

SPORTS clothes this year satisfy with even more thoroughness than ever the two great demands put upon them—viz., to be efficient and to do flattering things to the wearer. The efficiency they achieve, because they are highly specialized. Although there are some combination frocks that might be used for golf or tennis, the majority are made with their purpose definitely in mind. And, because they are so inexpensive we can afford the luxury of feeling "dressed for the occasion" whatever our favorite sports.

THE flattering quality results from the care with which the lines of the body are carried out. Exaggeration is only permitted if it suggests slightly broader shoulders and so narrow the hips. Otherwise, the silhouette is slim—although deceptively so, for inverted plaits discreetly used, open out in action to give all the necessary freedom of legs and arms.

THE TWO frocks sketched are excellent for their purpose. The golf dress (left) has been made by one who knows golf. The details, although some are not visible, prove this. An inverted plait, center back, and a slight widening of the sleeves to their edge, allow the utmost comfort for that "follow-through" swing. The pockets are a joy-tees, lipstick, powder, handkerchief, can all be accommodated. The fabric is a dull, dull silk, and the color yellow, most effective against the green of the course.

THE TENNIS dress is of crisp white pique. Particular attention has been paid to any demand for speed that might be put upon it. The skirt is plaited, front and back, but the plaits start from a low moulded yoke. The neckline is high in the back as well as the front so that the shoulders won't slip off at the decisive swing of the racket. The monogram adds the personal touch. After a hard game, a nice, soft wool cardigan is perfect, and for decorative purposes, a gay scarf.

Are Modern Women Whiners Compared With Mothers?

Was life a snap for grandma?

And are modern mammas just bigger and better doormats, with burdens no woman should be asked to carry?

That was what Mrs. M. S. told us not long ago. According to her, back in the Good Old Days Mamma did nothing save sit in a rocking chair and chin about Symptoms with other Lazy Ladies—while the youngsters did all the work.

But today—do the youngsters wash the dishes? Will they sweep a floor?

Not so's you could notice it, Mrs. M. S. S. snorted. And so she longed for time to turn back where, according to her, Mama got a break.

But Dorothy says—

"That's ridiculous! I'll admit that plenty of people don't teach the children to help around the house, but—

"My mother washed dozens of petticoats and dresses every Monday for herself, my sister and me—and she not only washed them. She made them. By 8:30 she was 'over the tubs' even on the hottest day, washing innumerable towels, linens, shirts and other things. Noon brought three hungry children home for lunch. The house had to be cleaned—and we didn't have patent vacuums in those days. It was done with plain elbow grease. About two in the afternoon, my Dad had to have a meal because he worked nights. At six, there was still another meal for four hungry humans.

"Time during the day had to be found for cleaning, cooking, baking, preserving. In those days you couldn't run down to the corner store for a loaf of bread and a couple of cans. My mother 'put up' hundreds of quarts of fruit, vegetables, jam, jelly and pickles, and even cured her own meat. She did all her own sewing, too. You couldn't go out in those days and buy a dress or a coat.

LACK OF CONVENIENCES

"We weren't poor people, either, according to the standards of those days. We were just a middle-class family, living as most people lived. My mother wouldn't have thought it right to spend her husband's hard-earned money to buy ready-made things, or to hire work done that she could do herself.

"Of course we children learned to help but I know that what little help we may have given was far from compensating her for her hours of hard labor and worry. And as for grandmother! What with the lack of conveniences she had to put up with, and the knitting and other work she did, in addition to all the things a woman in my mother's time had on her hands—well, if she ever had any time to rest, I can't figure where it was.

DID NOT COMPLAIN

"These modern women, who whine and complain about what they have to do, make me sick! I'll gamble that Mrs. M. S. S. couldn't stand up to one week of what my mother did most of her life. The idea! But what's the use of arguing with such a person?

"But I'd just like to say this—that with all they had to do, you never heard any fussing or complaints from either my mother or my grandmother!

"Personally, I'd like to know what's the matter with women nowadays. A little work seems to knock them for a loop. Yet women who actually made the things they ate and used got along so well! But women nowadays have no interests in their home. I guess it's because nothing means much to us unless we have a hand in making it. Housework is so easy now that wives take no pride in it."

Is that so? I wonder. How about the women you know? Are they lazy gadabouts—discontented whiners—or do they love their homes as much as their mothers did?

Let's have answers.

Fay King Looks Back at Us From Two Thousand Years Hence

By FAY KING

The time must come when we shall be ancients and antiquity. When all this we think so modern and enlightened shall in turn be considered but the quaint customs of a forgotten people.

Nothing is so certain as change, and a thousand years is but a day of history.

When we look at ancient maps we see great empires now long gone. Just so, in time, students of a distant day will make researches into our times as we have done with the Egyptians, Greeks and Romans.

It would be interesting to return to this world in two thousand years from now to discover how little we shall matter then.

The vanity of man resents this thought. But the past also thought it would endure forever.

Madge Learns That "Nick" and "Tony" Are Gangsters

The bones of generations of Puritan ancestors must have shuffled uneasily in their graves at my reaction to the hail from the jovial man in the big maroon sedan.

Normally, under any ordinary, circumstances, such a salutation would have filled me with distaste, if it did not actually alarm me, and I should have answered it with icy dignity. But before the sedan drew up to the side of the road, all my energies had been focused upon just one desire—for a powerful motor car by means of which I could trace the one which held Marion a prisoner. This one, appearing out of nowhere, was like an answer to prayer, and the two men who occupied it seemed like angels of mercy, although an instinct that I refused to heed told me that they had more of the earmarks of another type of unearthly visitors.

So it was that in answer to the jovial voice saying "Hello, sister! Don't you want a lift?" I found myself smiling back at the animated face of the man with the foreign accent, and saying eagerly:

"Oh, thank you; if you will be so kind. I need a car desperately."

The jovial eyes narrowed a trifle, and I realized that something in my voice or my diction or my manner had caused him to appraise me a bit differently than he had at his first casual glance. But before he could answer the other man, lean, swarthy, dark and as dour as his better upholstered companion was cheerful, struck peremptorily into the colloquy.

OBJECTION OVERRULED

"Cut the gab, Nick, and come along! We've got more important things to do than taxying blondes. How do you know she isn't a stall, a plant? Be on your way, babe!" He suddenly turned and addressed me. "Beat it! You'll have to walk home from your ride unless some bigger sucker than we are—I mean I am—comes along. Nick's always meat for any good-looking skirt."

"If you let any more of that tripe out of your trap, Tony, I'll close it for you for keeps."

Tony made the obvious retort, but feebly.

"Yeah? You and what marine corps?" he asked, but Nick was speaking to me again.

"Don't pay any attention to him, sister; he's always cuckoo. Come round the other side and climb in with me. Lucky Tony's in the back seat already, for he'd sure have to move there now."

There evidently was no precedent, in the world of Nick and Tony, for getting out of a car for so trivial a purpose as assisting a woman to enter it. Tony, sprawled on the seat behind, fairly glared at me as I came around the car, while Nick simply grinned at me companionably from his seat behind the wheel.

OFFERS TO RENT CAR

It was that grin which gave me courage to broach my desperate need to him when I was once settled in my seat, and Nick had sent the car along the road again.

"I told you I needed a car desperately," I began. "I wonder if it would be possible for me to rent this one from you for an hour or so."

I was looking intently at his face. Although I could not see his eyes, I could imagine the wary look that had come into them; but his face was patently the kind described as "poker." Not a muscle of it changed.

Tony spoke first.

"What did I tell you?" he snarled. "This dame is a plant."

"And I told you to keep that trap of yours shut," Nick retorted, not venomously this time, but with the annoyed air of a man trying to rid himself of a pest. He waited for several seconds before speaking again, and I sensed that he was turning my proposal over and over in his mind, looking for some menace in it.

When at last he spoke, there was a something in his voice that had not been there before.

"Better come clean, sister," he said. "Just why do you want to rent this car? Is it because it happens to be mine, or would any crate do you!"

Household Hints

To remove remains of egg from plates or spoons, wash off in cold water as hot water hardens the remains.

A tablespoon of sugar put into the tin while the joint is roasting improves the flavor and gives the gravy a richer color.

Clocks can be cleaned at home by placing a piece of cotton wool soaked with kerosene at the bottom of the clock, inside, and leaving it there for a few days. The fumes of the kerosene will loosen the dirt and dust in the clocks so that it will all fall down on to the cotton wool.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Passing Cream

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When at a table, from which side is it proper to pass sugar and cream, when it is placed before me?

2—One of the girls in our chapter became engaged recently. I have met her fiance just once, before her engagement, but I expect to see him and probably dance with him at a dinner dance we are all attending. Just what shall I say, if anything, regarding their engagement?

3—I have just become a member of a sorority. When one of the girls of the chapter introduces me to the grand president, just what would be the proper thing to say, after the introduction, before departing? R.

1—There isn't any rule about this . . . just pass the sugar and cream to which ever side it is convenient.

2—It would be natural for you to congratulate him on the engagement . . . that is the word to use, congratulate or congratulations. Something like this: "May I offer you my heartiest congratulations on your engagement? I was so happy to hear the news. Dorothy has been one of my best friends for a long time . . . she's a wonderful girl, and I'm sure that you and she will be very happy."

3—Something like this: "Goodbye, Miss Adams. It was such a special pleasure to meet you, and I hope I'm to have that honor again soon."

Build Early for Baby's Adult Life

I recently attended a meeting at which mothers discussed the various aspects of child welfare and the care of the infant. I was amazed to hear these women so capably discuss difficult problems of child rearing. When I was called upon to address the gathering there was almost nothing left to be said.

Dr. Copeland

I believe too many mothers overlook the importance of having a regular daily routine for the baby. This is necessary for the welfare, both of baby and of the mother.

Feedings should be at a definite time. Training in elimination, the giving of cod liver oil, bathing, playing and daily naps, should be at definite times each day.

Routine schedules are often broken because the fond parent gives in to the baby's crying. This is unfortunate because when once the baby learns that crying will help, it will continue to cry until it gets its own way. A child should not be taken out of its crib merely because it cries.

Make sure that the infant is not wet, cold, or too warm. See that there is no misplaced pin or wrinkled bed clothing. If you are sure that there is no cause for the crying, ignore the child. It will soon learn that crying is useless and go to sleep.

In what I have said I do not mean to imply that persistent crying should be overlooked. Of course the thing to do is to find the cause and remove it. When an adult has pain he is able to give an accurate description of his pain and then it is easy to locate it. But in the baby the presence of pain can only be suspected and determined after careful observation.

When baby has pain it cries. It also cries when it is hungry, cold or soiled. The cry of pain is different from the other outbursts. Most mothers can easily distinguish it from the cry caused by hunger or temper.

Good health habits must be taught to children at an early age. The child should be taught to eat all foods and never to develop a dislike for any one food. The food should be varied and tempting to the eye and palate. Parents should avoid discussing foods they dislike in the presence of children.

Mealtime should be punctual and meals served without rush. The breakfast is the most important meal of the older child and sufficient time should be allotted for it. Never permit your child to go to school without his breakfast. A good breakfast means a good start for the day. It should consist of fruit, a hot or cold cereal, a glass of milk and buttered toast.

No one will deny that child health depends largely upon the care given by the mother. The modern mother has many advantages. She is in a better position successfully to rear her children than were her grandparents.

TWO ACCUSING HUSBANDS WIN DIVORCES

Two wives who charged that their husbands were friendly with other women were granted divorces yesterday by Judge George V. Moore.

Mrs. Linna B. Lord, of 4716 Ellsworth avenue, granted a divorce from Franklin G. Lord, of 6730 Woodmount street, testified her husband told her it had cost him $3,000 to settle with a girl and then added:

"How do you like that?"

TELLS OF PHONE CALL

Mrs. Lord, a nurse, was 29 in 1926, when she was married to Lord. She informed the court:

"I found a book in the automobile trunk and there was a name in it. I called that address and found my husband was there. He came home in 10 minutes. He admitted he was going around with another girl."

Mrs. Minnie E. Schwalm, of 8903 Frankstown road, granted a divorce from Walter E. Schwalm, of New Kensington, who is engaged in the printing business, testified she adopted a 3-year-old boy in the hope of keeping the home together. However, she said, "things went from bad to worse."

CHARGES THREAT

Mrs. Schwalm claimed her husband threatened to kill her and the maid. She added:

"He told me he wanted a divorce so he could marry the other woman."

They were married April 13, 1902. She testified her husband left her Christmas, 1931.

"NOT CONSTIPATED FOR SEVEN WEEKS"

Writes Mrs. Johnson After Using Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Sufferers from constipation will be interested in this unsolicited letter:

"Your ALL-BRAN surely relieves constipation. I am so glad over the good it has done me that I feel I must write and tell you of it.

"For lunch I take a banana, a large one. Six tablespoons of ALL-BRAN in a sauce dish, and dip banana at each bite until all is consumed. I haven't been constipated now for seven weeks."—Mrs. Louise Johnson, 1433 Forest Street, Denver, Colorado.

Constipation often causes headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sleeplessness. This condition is usually due to lack of "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further promote regular habits. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has both, as well as iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, it clears out the wastes.

Try ALL-BRAN in place of patent medicines—often harmful. Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Use as a cereal, or in cooking. Recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

CLASHES MARK STRIKE IN SPAIN

MADRID, May 9.—(AP.)—One death, numerous injuries, scores of bombings and the tearing up of railway lines marked the beginning today of a two-day general strike which syndicalists sought to make nation-wide.

The strike was reported effective in various parts of the country, but the government immediately invoked extreme measures to curb the demonstration.

Manuel Andres Casaus, Director of Public Safety, ordered all syndicalist headquarters closed and the organization dissolved and outlawed. Andres also announced the arrest early today of 12 ranking military officers who are to be deported to Las Palmas, Canary Islands.

VOTE QUIZ HEAD MEETS GRAHAM

Attorney Earl F. Reed, special government prosecutor in the contemplated federal grand jury probe of vote cheating charges in the Muldowney-Felix and the Erk—Brooks Congressional elections, conferred yesterday afternoon with government attorneys.

It was Reed's first conference with United States Attorney Louis E. Graham and the latter's first assistant, James I. Marsh, since he returned Thursday from Washington. None of the conferees would discuss the meeting or say whether a special grand jury would be summoned.

The regular grand jury was dismissed last Wednesday. It was said then the special prosecutor was not prepared to submit the cases because he and Marsh had not had time to study the report of special government investigators.

CLEVELAND, May 9.—(AP.)—City Councilman Alexander L. de Maioribus is ready to whip "anyone who boos me."

He issued the challenge to about 200 persons in the council chamber last night. Some of the visitors booed when Maioribus finished a speech on a city redistricting plan.

The Councilman turned to the crowd and thundered:

"You can boo me, but anyone who boos me I can lick."

Principal on Trial In School Fraud

MEADVILLE, Pa., May 9.—(AP.)—A former principal of Titusville High School, Paul J. Murphy, went on trial here yesterday facing four charges of fraudulent conversion.

When court adjourned late in the afternoon the prosecution had completed its case and had succeeded in introducing as testimony four receipts and one "school order," which the commonwealth alleges show that Murphy received tuition money, made out receipts for it, but failed to turn the sums over to the school board.

ASKS RAILWAYS PACT EXTENDED

In a letter to City Council, Charles A. Finley, chairman of the Traction Conference Board, recommends that the agreement between the city and the Pittsburgh Railways Company be extended two years.

The agreement, drawn for 10 years, will expire in February, 1934, unless the extension is granted.

Finley pointed to the railways' revenue loss since 1929 and the difficulty of forecasting future earnings. He said present financial conditions made it virtually impossible to draw up a new long term contract.

An ordinance extending the agreement two years was to be discussed today in Council committee meeting.

Gulf's high-speed delivery system rushes fresh Gulf gas to the pumps. And that gas stays fresh longer, due to Gulf's exclusive R-D-R process . . . a process that actually delays deterioration.

So no matter where you buy Gulf gas that R-D-R process insures you're getting FRESH gas . . . lively, peppy, packed with power. No extra cost. © 1933, GULF REFINING CO., PITTSBURGH, PA.

2 FRESH GULF GAS lessens knock. It fires better . . . forms less carbon than stale gas because of the R-D-R process.

3 FRESH GULF GAS gives more mileage, because it delivers to your motor all the qualities put into it at the refinery . . . qualities lost in stale gas.

GULF

1 ISN'T IT GREAT to feel the surge of extra power in your car? Get it . . . with FRESH Gulf gas! It contains more highly volatile "light ends," more power elements than stale gas.

4 FRESH GULF GAS gives you instant starting, and quicker get-away than stale gas. Because it contains all of the elements for perfect combustion.

FOES HIT ONLY .197 AGAINST ROVERS

FOR A CLUB that "hasn't got the pitching," George Gibson's crew has been making in its brilliant early drive a defensive record that might be called fair-to-middling. In blanking the Braves on three hits yesterday for his second shut-out and his fourth victory in five starts, Larry French made another contribution to a streak of spring hurling by the Pirate staff that has been consistently impressive. French's own record compares favorably with any other in the majors. In his five games he has allowed only nine earned runs and 33 hits.

Larry French

And that's only a sample of what the staff as a whole has been doing. In the 18 games played up to today, the Pittsburgh pitchers held their opponents to 45 runs and 116 hits, and only 35 of the runs were earned. That means an average of less than two earned runs and only a fraction more than six hits per game. The 116 hits were made in 590 times at bat, so that the entire opposing field—and every other club except the Giants has been faced—has been able to make a batting average of only .197 against Pittsburgh pitching, as compared with the Bucs' average of .261. Only five times has the enemy made more than three runs in a game. A total of four shutouts has been equaled only by the Giants in the majors. Opponents soon may be willing to admit that the Pirates have a few pretty fair hurlers after all, besides speed and timely hitters.

MANY FANS ARE inclined to view the Yankees mainly as a great hitting team and to attribute their success to their batting power, but according to Bucky Harris the greatest strength of the New Yorkers lies in their pitching staff. He says it is the best in the league.

But at that, Harris insists that the club as a whole is not as good as it was in 1932. With so many veterans among the regulars, he thinks there must be a slowing up along the line. The Detroit manager is not conceding any pennants to the Yankees and declares the Senators are not to be laughed off.

INCIDENTAL TO PROVING this spring that he still is one of the most valuable pitchers in the business, even without figuring his hitting ability, Red Lucas has upset the old theory that the flinger who misses most of the training trip never gets away to a good start.

Lucas pitched only one-third of a game during the entire training trip of the Reds—three innings in an exhibition tilt with the Braves in Tampa—yet his work has been brilliant ever since the season opened. The case recalls that of Eddie Roush, who, on the same club, used to miss whole training trips and then come in to lead the National League in batting.

THE BRAVES PROBABLY will send Al Wright back to the minors for more seasoning, but they appear to have found a prize in Dick Gyselman, who came up with him. Gyselman has made himself a fixture on the Hub club, and Bill Terry, Giant manager, pronounces him one of the most promising young infielders he has seen make the grade in several years. An unusual degree of poise is one thing that helped to win a big league job for Gyselman in his first year. He never gets flustered. Most rookie infielders hurry things and make a lot of wild throws in their anxiety to get the ball to the right spot, but not this Boston recruit. He's actually nonchalant.

Frank Crosetti

NOT THAT HE is thinking of doing anything of the kind, but Joe McCarthy has an argument on with the Detroit club as to his right to farm out Frank Crosetti. Frank Navin, Tiger owner, says the Yanks would have to get waivers on the shortstop. McCarthy insists that if he should desire to ship Crosetti to Newark or elsewhere under option he has that privilege.

It all depends on the filed date of the original deal with San Francisco for the purchase of Crosetti, who was allowed to remain with the Seals in 1931 though the property of the Yanks. Players may be optioned out without waivers within two years of the official recording of such purchases. McCarthy is in the right so far as term of service goes, as a player may be farmed without waivers before he has played an aggregate of two full seasons in the majors. Crosetti has been up only one full season and to date in 1933.

HOWEVER, M'CARTHY SAYS he has no thought of trying to farm Crosetti, and repeats that Lyn Lary is not for sale to Detroit or any other club. Not only does he figure he needs all of his best material for his own use, but he is wary of strengthening any rival.

The situation leads to a lot of guessing as to what steps the Yankee manager will take when he has to reduce his squad to 23 men next Monday. Two players will have to be dropped.

ANALYZING CAUSES AND effects in seeking an explanation of the inferior performances given rather frequently by some of the present-day boxers who are supposed to be front-rankers, fistic veterans insist that much of the poor work in the ring today is due to the keen dislike that fighters have developed for running. Many a boxer prefers any other kind of training to road-work, but the old-timers will tell you that running is essential to the attainment of the best physical form. It is said that even in football, the long list of injuries is due in part to lack of necessary running during the training period. Running plays such an important part in conditioning that it is favored by stars in other lines, even in sports where you might think it wouldn't be needed. Willie Hoppe, the billiardist, runs five miles daily, aside from hours of cue practice, while preparing for a tournament or a big match, and so does Newell Banks, checker player.

MANY OF THE golf clubs throughout the country have tried to keep things going and combat the depression in novel ways. One of the most unusual wrinkles in the drive to cure the hard-times ailment and keep members enthusiastic and active was put on by the Gowanie Golf and Country Club, of Mt. Clemens, Mich.

The first thing the club did was to wipe all the indebtedness of the old members off the books, canceling all bills and overdue charges and permitting every one to start off all over again with a clean slate. Then it staged an open house one day, permitting members and guests to play free of charge.

IN CONNECTION WITH the things that college football coaches have to worry about at this time, comes a bulletin that out at the University of Michigan they're wondering what to do about a successor to Harry Newman, all-America quarterback.

John T. Taylor

An unfeeling observer in another quarter remarks that probably the other schools in the Big Ten trust that the problem will be permanent. Their recollections of Newman are such that they hardly want to see any more like him for a long time.

JOHN T. TAYLOR, secretary-treasurer of the Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U., has received a letter from J. F. Roche, of New Orleans, chairman of the National Athletes' Development Committee, suggesting that the Neighborhood Athletic Club idea be tried around here. The plan is going over big in Texas, where it was started by Ernie Hjertberg, track coach at Rice Institute in Houston. It is the intention of the promoters to take care of the working boy, the high school graduate who cannot go to college, and the college man who wishes to continue his athletics after graduation, by providing them with proper coaching and adequate facilities. A club is to be formed in each neighborhood, and the residents urged to adopt it as their own. All officials are to be amateurs and the clubs are to be under the control of their members, with the coaching staff acting as advisers. Finances are to be raised by inter-club and inter-district competition in track and field, boxing, baseball, wrestling, basketball, soccer, etc. It is hoped to create friendly rivalry among towns or among the various districts of the larger cities, and in this way stir up a new interest in athletics and give working boys an equal chance with college men to develop their ability. Secretary-Treasurer Taylor will be glad to start a general organization movement in these parts if there is a sufficient response to the suggestion.

53 TO CLASH MONDAY IN LOCAL TEST

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP.)—The selection of Chicago as the venue of the 1933 national open golf championship was reflected today in a big decrease in Eastern entries and a corresponding increase in competitors from the West, especially the Chicago district.

A total of 913 golfers have entered this year as against 1,012 in 1932 and a study of the sectional lists for the nation-wide qualifying round next Monday shows that the East can be charged entirely with this loss. New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Washington show an aggregate decrease of 164 entries for their qualifying tests.

204 FROM CHICAGO

Of the 913 officially in the lists, 33 are exempted from the 36-hole qualifying round by virtue of their showing in the 1932 open, and will go directly to the championship proper at the North Shore Golf Club, Glenview, Ill., June 8-9-10. The remaining 880 will fight it out on 21 sectional courses next Monday for the 117 places that remain to be filled.

Boston, 42 entries, 6 places; New York, 109 and 15; Philadelphia, 55 and 7; Washington, 38 and 5; Atlanta, 7 and 1; Dallas, 20 and 2; Pittsburgh, 53 and 7; Cleveland, 66 and 9; Detroit, 37 and 5; Chicago, 204 and 27; St. Paul, 20 and 2; St. Louis, 29 and 4; Kansas City, 49 and 7; Denver, 24 and 3; Los Angeles, 13 and 2; San Francisco, 11 and 2; Portland, Ore., 3 and 1; Omaha, 18 and 2; Dayton, 46 and 6; Buffalo, 16 and 2; Nashville, 20 and 2.

33 STARS EXEMPT

The 33 exempt players, headed by Gene Sarazen, the defending titleholder, are those who finished among the first 30 and ties at Fresh Meadow last June. Only Jose Jurado, the little Argentine pro, among the leaders, failed to enter for this year's play. The exempt players are

53 ENTER LOCALLY

The Pittsburgh district entries, 53 in all, will battle it out for the seven places awarded Pittsburgh over the Oakmont course next Monday. The Pittsburgh district entries, with pairings and starting times:

9:30—James J. O'Donnell, Wilkinsburg; Knox Young, Jr., Pittsburgh; Joseph C. Totten, Pittsburgh.
9:35—C. E. Manning, Bellevue; Herbert F. Miller, Jr., Aliquippa; Ken Rutherford, Indiana.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: A WONDER OF GROWTH—Bovista Gigantea is a fungus of the family Lycoperdaceae and grows from the size of a pea to the size of a watermelon within a single night. Its growth involves the production of 66,000,000 cells during every minute of that wonderful night. Its weight is close to 20 pounds when fully developed.

SWIM CHAMPS WITH SEALS

The first swimming star of the Carnegie Library, of Homestead, will join with the present-day stars and coach of that organization in a special swimming program of the Trained Seals of the Sports Department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph over WCAE at 7 o'clock tomorrow evening.

Ralph V. Shinton, swimming instructor at the McNaugher School, on the North Side, is the former Homestead ace. He began his starring career in 1907, along with Curt Sloan. His feats included short, middle and long-distance swimming, high diving and water polo. He quit his amateur career in 1911, when he loomed as an Olympic Games hope, to turn professional, and has developed many good swimmers since and also is well known as a referee of amateur boxing bouts and is active as an official in other amateur sports.

Appearing with Shinton will be Misses Lenore Kight, national champion mermaid, and Miss Anna Mae Gorman, her teammate, along with Jack Scarry, their coach. Miss Kight defends her Allegheny Mountain Association A. A. U. 500-yard free-style title in the Homestead pool, Friday night. She also holds the national title at this distance and is the holder of the world record for the event.

Camera Discloses Rough Riding In Derby

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP.)—Obvious rough riding on the part of both jockeys, with Broker's Tip apparently the best horse, was disclosed by the news reel in a vivid camera description of the Kentucky Derby.

The pictures showed Herb Fisher, up on Head Play, apparently the first offender. He grabbed the saddle cloth of Broker's Tip when Don Meade drove the Bradley colt through on the rail. Twice Broker's Tip pulled away from his rival only to have his pace retarded by Fisher again snatching the saddle cloth.

Meade retaliated, grabbing Fisher by the shoulder as the two horses battled, stride for stride, through the final sixteenth of a mile. Near the finish Fisher struck Meade over the head with his whip.

Eye Trouble Cause Of Vosmik's Slump

CLEVELAND, May 9.—(AP.)—Joe Vosmik, fleet-footed Cleveland outfielder and rated a .300 hitter, is going to an eye specialist as a result of his poor showing at the plate this season.

Out of 80 times at bat, Vosmik has hit safely only 10 times for an average of .125. An eye specialist who examined Joe's optics found each of them "four points off," which means only slightly defective vision.

BOSTON, May 9.—Victors in four of their five tilts with Seaboard rivals since they left Pittsburgh, the Pirates today are riding high, wide and handsome on the National League crest. A swift-moving triumph over the Braves yesterday while the Giants were losing gave the Pittsburghers a comfortable margin over the New Yorkers, who lost a hard battle to the Cardinals.

Gibby's hustlers carved five doubles out of the southpaw pitching of Tom Zachary yesterday as they earned a 3-0 victory over the same bird who has floored them on many occasions since he transferred his baseball allegiance to the National League. The big cluster of two-sackers spilled the beans for the Boston boys.

Larry French hung up his fourth triumph of the new season in the inaugural with the Braves. The aggressive lefthander was so keen in his initial appearance here the home boys could collect only three hits.

DOUBLES TURN TRICK

Waite Hoyt will attempt to add to his senior league exploits when the same clubs meet this afternoon. The former star of the Yankee outfit has the Pittsburgh slab assignment. He is likely to be opposed by Huckleberry Betts, the tow-haired righthander of the McKechnie flinging corps.

The two-sacker output unloaded against easy-going Zachary did not get underway until the fifth round. Through four runless innings the youthful and veteran lefthanders matched their slab skill, with honors practically even.

Arky Vaughan started off the Pittsburgh fireworks as he pried off the fifth inning. Arky doubled to center, and Tony Piet came through with a two-bagger to left center that brought in the first run of the game.

LARRY SCORES RUN

Two were out in the eighth before the Pirate scoring machine functioned. Laughing Larry started the dash as he reached first on Schulmerich's muff. L. Waner's single sent Larry to second. Lindstrom came through with a single to right, and French sprinted across the disc.

BASEBALL COMEDY

By NICK ALTROCK

ST. LOUIS, May 9.—When it comes to swallowing my pride, I am usually on a diet, but I certainly guessed wrong on the Reds this year. The Cincis have been buried in the cellar so long you almost figured they were roommates with Tut-Ankh-Amen. So when I gazed into the crystal ball for 1933, I picked the Reds to trail seven-eighths of the National League.

Nick Altrock

Of course, they may yet go all to pieces like a jigsaw puzzle and make Nicholas a front line prophet. But right now they are making your old soothsayer look like a chimpanzee's brother.

I don't know what Donie Bush has done to the boys, but he must have innoculated 'em with artificial lightning or something. And they are certainly striking twice in the same place and sometimes cleaning up the whole series.

A month ago, I wise-cracked that the Cinci club consisted of Pitcher Red Lucas and the franchise. I hereby withdraw the insult, swallow my pride and wash it down with Cincinnati beer. What could be fairer?

WILSON ADDS EDDIE SHEA TO LIST OF VICTIMS

JACKIE EASY VICTOR IN GARDEN GO

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Before one of the smallest crowds of the indoor season here, and in one of the poorest main bouts of the year, the local Negro featherweight jabbed and cuffed the shell of Eddie Shea, of Chicago, a once-good fighter, throughout 10 rounds of listless fighting to win the unanimous decision in the Motor Square Garden ring last night.

Jackie Wilson

Shea was even worse than he was in his only other local appearance, against old Steve Smith in the same ring three years ago, and, after Jackie got over a first-round rush by the stocky veteran, he had easy sailing. Eddie outweighed him by five and one-half pounds, at 129½ against 124, but was slow and wheezing like a horse with bad bellows as early as the second round.

SHEA TOO SLOW

Referee Al Grayber tried his best to urge on Eddie, but it just wasn't in the latter to match his measured pace against the flitting movements of the agile Jackie, who kept him at bay with his footwork and his jabbing and occasionally hooked his left or shot a right to the head. Wilson gave Shea little chance to drum away on the inside, tying him up securely.

As round followed round and the action became monontonous, the crowd realized Shea was doing his best, and also that it wasn't any good. As for Wilson, he boxed his usual earnest bout in his own peculiar manner. Not a puncher or a boxer who is sufficiently reckless to stand up and take unnecessary chances slugging, he may not be spectacular, but you can't overlook the fact that he is fighting any and everybody the promoters bring in for him and is winning, and results count.

Shea had an edge in the first and third rounds, an even break in the sixth and put on a desperate stand in the final session to hold his own. Over the remainder of the route, Wilson peppered him until he was dizzy.

SEVERO BEATS JALLOS

The best fight of the night was the semi-final in which Lou Jallos, Cleveland lightweight, rallied from counts for eight and nine in the first round to come on and put up a good, although losing, battle over the eight-round route with Louie Severo, of Meadville. A high right to the temple spilled him the first time and a right to the jaw dropped him again.

Nat Litfin, Hill featherweight, bested Andy Kosel, of Turtle Creek, all of the way in the second bout up to the time he cut the latter's right eye in the fifth round and the referee stopped the bout.

W.-J. Discontinues Trick Grid Jerseys

WASHINGTON, Pa., May 9.—When Hank Day's W. and J. grid eleven trots out onto the gridiron in the Pitt Stadium next fall for the opener with Pitt, observers may remark the Presidents are wearing the same old outfits of last year.

A second glance will reveal that although last year's jerseys are still employed, the famous brown W. and J. adorning the front that caused such a storm of controversy last season will be missing.

RIPLEY'S ODDITORIUM AT CHICAGO CENTURY OF PROGRESS WORLD FAIR THIS SUMMER

Seventy human oddities, including the Pittsburgh district's contribution, E. L. Blystone, the rice writer, from Ardara, Pa., will be assembled in this Believe It or Not Odditorium, or museum, by Robert L. Ripley, the cartoonist, whose work is a daily and Sunday feature of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, for exhibition at the World Fair in Chicago this summer. The oddities will be gathered from the far corners of the earth. The picture above is a copy of the architect's drawing of the building, which will have a frontage of 98 feet and will be 146 feet in depth, and will have a floor space of approximately 17,000 square feet. A.M.A. Title Events To Be Decided

Three Allegheny Mountain swimming championships will be decided in the Carnegie Library pool, Homestead, Friday night. Miss Lenore Kight will defend her 500-yard women's free style title. The other title events are the 220-yard women's junior free style and men's junior 500-yard free style.

The A. M. A. senior volleyball championships will be decided at the Pittsburgh Boys' Club, May 27. The A. M. A. junior track and field championships will be held on the Oliver High School field under the auspices of the Bellevue A. C., the same day.

The A. M. A. senior track and field championships have been awarded to the Pitt Stadium for June 10.

STATE AMATEUR RING CHAMPS CROWNED

By JESS CARVER

Just about the time the boys were becoming accustomed to turning out to see him whipped, Charley Crovatta, of Uniontown, star amateur boxer and a member of last year's U. S. Olympic ring squad, punched his way back into the favor of the fans.

Crovatta retained his state 147-pound title in the annual tourney which was concluded in the Pitt Stadium Pavilion last evening after four nights of milling by turning in two fine performances. In the semi-finals he beat a fellow townsman, Homer Johnson, with points to spare, and in the final, whipped the hard-hitting Joe Robinson, of Brownsville.

Six new champions were crowned last night, only Crovatta and Johnny Giachetti, the clever little 118-pounder, retaining their crowns.

Dutch Weir won the heavyweight toga from Buck Makrum, of Uniontown, by knocking him down for a nine count in the first round and holding him even in the second and third. Ray Hatton, of the J. L. Thomas Club, knocked out Gene Angulik, of Uniontown, to take the 112-pound title; Giachetti won by a technical knockout over Frank Salak, of McKees Rocks, in the 118-pound final; Leo Sweeney, of the Pittsburgh Boys' Club, senior A. M. A. champion, defeated George Martzo, of the J. L. Thomas Club, in the 126-pound clash; William Eley, Negro star, fighting his eighty-ninth amateur bout, added the 135-pound crown to his long list of honors; Al Quaill, Y. M. H. A. star, won the middleweight championship, and Woodrow White, of Kittanning, took down the light-heavyweight laurel.

Eley, the New Salem (Pa.) Negro, who holds the junior and senior A. M. A. lightweight titles, the Monongahela Valley and the Allegheny County Golden Gloves crowns, won the state 126-pound championship a year ago. He met a tough opponent in Paul Bailey, of Uniontown, in the final last night, but despite the handicap of being able to see out of only one eye, outboxed and outpunched his opponent.

The summary:

SEMI-FINALS

112-pound class—Ray Hatton, J. L. Thomas Club, defeated John Burke, Linwood Club; Gene Angulik, Sands A. C., defeated Buster Lowstetter, McKeesport A. C.

160-pound class—Al Quaill, Y. M. H. A. defeated Joe Vergosky, Sands A. C.

175-pound class—Woodrow White, Boylestein A. C., defeated Henry Klema, Boylestein A. C.

Fight Results

At Motor Square Garden—Jackie Wilson defeated Eddie Shea, 10 rounds; Louie Severo defeated Lou Jallos, 8 rounds; Nat Litfin won by technical knockout over Andy Kosel, 5 rounds; Gene Panos defeated Joey Zelano, 6 rounds.

At San Francisco—LeRoy Haynes knocked out K. O. Christner, 7 rounds; Al Manfino and Pietro Gengi drew, 6 rounds; Tommy Dill and Johnny Pasano drew, 4 rounds; Matt Calo knocked out Mickey Dodge, 1 round; Mickey Evans and Joey Roberts drew, 4 rounds.

At Charleston, W. Va.—Frankie Ryan and Johnny Roberts drew, 10 rounds; Paul Oger defeated Louis Cook, 8 rounds; Speedy Price defeated Jimmy Spilman, 4 rounds; Ralph Bumpus won by a technical knockout over Charles Williams, 2 rounds.

HOLLAND DIES AFTER BOUT

NEW ORLEANS, May 9.—(AP.) Jack Holland, who turned to professional boxing after a brilliant football career at Tulane University, died in Charity Hospital here at 7:30 a. m. today from what was described as cerebral hemorrhage.

Holland fell unconscious following a bout last night with Tony Marullo, of New Orleans. He remained unconscious to the end.

Ireland Advances In Davis Cup Play

COPENHAGEN, May 9.—(AP.)—Ireland today won its Davis Cup series with Denmark, as G. Lyttleton Rogers, giant Irish leader, defeated A. Jacobsen in the third singles match, 6-1, 6-3, 6-4. The victory was the third for the Irish forces, making the final singles match unnecessary.

Ireland will meet Japan in the second round.

RAMEY TO BOX DUBLINSKY AT ARENA

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Bucky Lawless vs. Six Seconds Powell, 8 rounds, Plainfield, N. J.

Score another bullseye hit for Lew Raymond, matchmaker for the Arena and Greenlee Field, who announced today that he has signed Wesley Ramey, of Grand Rapids, recent decisive conqueror of Topy Canzoneri, the lightweight champion, in a non-title bout, to box Harry Dublinsky, of Chicago, who has starred in bouts at the Garden here, for his main bout at the Arena, Friday night of next week.

This shapes up as one of the classiest matches between out-of-town principals to be booked here in a couple of seasons, and should have no trouble selling itself to the fans. Ramey has appeared here only once, beating Battling Gizzy in the Meyers Bowl.

BOWL TO OPERATE

Prematurely counted out of the running, the pioneer outdoor arena of the Pittsburgh district will swing into action the last week of this month, according to Carl Baldridge, owner of the Bowl, who announced today he will know definitely by tomorrow whether he will operate the Bowl himself or will lease it to an outside promoter, said to be Joe Mazer, of Motor Square Garden.

The Bowl has the choice of Wednesday or Friday nights and likely will decide upon the latter, according to Baldridge.

With the Bowl in the field again, fans of Pittsburgh and vicinity will have three outdoor arenas from which to choose their features. Hickey Park, in Millvale, will open on Monday, May 22, and Greenlee Field, on the Hill, on Thursday, June 1. Ted Yarosz will box Tommy Freeman in the Hickey Park opening show, and Vince Dundee will tangle with Frankie Goosby in the Greenlee Field inaugural.

The Bowl management probably will change the name of its plant, the chances being that it will be known simply as the North Braddock Bowl.

Between Rounds

The card has been completed for the Arena's weekly show on the North Side, Friday night with the signing of Joey Bazzone, of McKeesport, a willing lightweight, to box Jack O'Britton, of Akron, in the six-round opening bout. In three 10-rounders, Frankie Wallace boxes Georgie Riley, the Alabama Kid meets Joe Ruggazzoni and Johnny Datto trades blows with Petey Sarron.

A Golden Gloves amateur tournament will be held by the Variety Club in Clarksburg, W. Va., May 18-19. An amateur show for the Clerks' Association of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company in the Westinghouse Cafeteria, East Pittsburgh, May 26.

Tiger Roy Smith and Fritz Heinz box a 10-rounder in Detroit Friday night. Jackie Purvis meets Johnny Phagan and Johnny Fitzpatrick meets Kid Irish in eight-round bouts in Cicero, Ill., the same night.

Harry Klaas, announcer at the Arena and also at Hickey Park the last two summers, will shift his outdoor activities to Greenlee Field this summer because his work will not permit him to serve on Monday nights. Ray Sherle, who formerly announced at Greenlee Field, probably will take over the Millvale assignment.

I COULD NEVER GET A DECENT SHAVE UNTIL—

"I USED to be a crab about shaving. My beard is plenty tough and I had to pick out ingrown hairs by the dozen.

"I tried all kinds of blades, but could never get a decent shave—until one morning a friend of mine asked me to try one of his razor blades.

"It was a Probak—and the first time I ever used one. I never had such a shave in my life—not a bit of smart or irritation. Now I almost never have an ingrown hair. Probak ended my shaving troubles and it's a pleasure to tell my friends about it."

Cases like this prove that Probak is the blade for hard-to-shave beards. If you find shaving painful or difficult, try the double-edge Probak. We guarantee you the same shaving comfort Probak is now giving thousands and thousands of other men. You'll find Probak different—because from the tempering of its steel to final honing, Probak is made especially for you. Make your next shave a Probak shave.

An Announcement by Pittsburgh Brewing Co.

Effective Wednesday, May 10th, the price of

will be $2.00 per case of 24 bottles, to the consumer. (Plus $1.00 deposit for case and bottles which will be rebated upon return). Price to dealers will be increased proportionately.

This change in price has been made necessary by:

Increased Cost of Raw Materials
Increased Taxes
Increased Wages

Hops have risen in price 160%, malt 33%. Other materials entering into the making of beer also have increased substantially.

Iron City Beer was Pittsburgh's Favorite before prohibition and still enjoys that distinction. It is the policy of this company to maintain the high quality of its product at any cost. Nothing but the best materials will ever be used in the making of Iron City Beer, and, despite the thousands of unfilled orders, it will always be properly aged.

Continued rain again threatened the sandlot baseball card listed for tonight. The Dormont-Homewood battle in the City League, scheduled for the Homewood Playgrounds this evening, was postponed until Friday because of the poor condition of the playing field. Mayor John S. Herron and other city officials were scheduled to participate in the opening ceremonies, but the same program will be put on Friday.

Two other games were carded in the City League today, the Whitakers being slated to appear in Bloomfield against the Thomas Club and the North Siders at Brentwood.

Dreshar Made Coach At Tarentum High

TARENTUM, Pa., May 9.—John Dreshar, football captain at Carnegie Tech in 1929 and 1930, and assistant grid coach at Western Reserve University in Cleveland in 1931, has been elected football coach at Tarentum High School, succeeding Bill Younkins. Dreshar was elected at a meeting of the Board of Education last night.

Dreshar played guard and center at Carnegie Tech. He entered Tech from Bellefonte Academy, where he was a member of the national prep school champion eleven turned out by that institution in 1926. His home is in Greensburg.

WEST HAS EDGE

BUCCOS, CARDS HEAD DRIVE IN EAST

Associated Press.

The evidence is just about conclusive now that once more the Western clubs pack most of the power in the National League.

In the first 24 games of the campaign's initial East-West series, the invaders from beyond the Allegenies have gained a 2-1 edge—16 victories against eight defeats—and this in the East's own strongholds.

The West checked in with two more triumphs yesterday as the Pittsburgh Pirates blanked the Boston Braves behind Larry French's pitching, and the St. Louis Cardinals took the home run route in overcoming stubborn resistance from the New York Giants. The Pirates and Cards together have accounted for nine victories in 11 starts in the East.

CARDS BEAT GIANTS

The Cardinals made only three hits off Fred Fitzsimmons, but they beat the Giants, 4-3, on home runs by Joe Medwick and Frankie Frisch. Medwick's came with the bases empty in the second, but there were two aboard when Frisch connected in the eighth. As it turned out, both were needed, for Tex Carleton was driven from the box in the last of the eighth after Sam Leslie had clouted a homer with two on.

Rain and cold weather forced postponement of the other two games in the National League and only two were played in the American.

In one, Don Brennan pitched the New York Yankees to a 7-3 triumph over the Chicago White Sox. Ted Lyons, veteran Pale Hose right hander, collected a pair of doubles and a single, but walked six men, uncorked two wild pitches and was drubbed for 12 hits. The Sox secured 10 off Brennan, but the big rookie tightened up in the pinches.

SENATORS WIN

The Washington Senators staggered through to a 10-8 victory over the Browns at St. Louis when Bob Boken, substitute second baseman, clouted a homer with Fred Schulte on the paths in the twelfth.

Six pitchers allowed a total of 35 hits, five of which went to Luke Sewell, Senator backstop.

EARNSHAW SENT HOME

George Earnshaw, who left the A's suddenly for Philadelphia late yesterday after the first game of the Athletics' series with the Detroit Tigers had been called because of cold weather, was sent home, to "get into condition," according to Connie Mack, manager of the club.

The veteran Earnshaw has suffered more than the youngsters thus far this year because of the bad weather encountered by the Philadelphia club, which has had more than its share of rain and frigid breezes. Earnshaw has not worked since April 24, Mack said, and he feels that Earnshaw will have a better chance to get in shape by working out in the mornings in Philadelphia weather.

DON MEADE OUT OF PREAKNESS

BALTIMORE, May 9.—(AP.)—The suspension of Don Meade for action during his ride of E. R. Bradley's Broker's Tip to victory in the Kentucky Derby caused considerable speculation around the Pimlico track as to the jockey who will be up on the colt in the Preakness Saturday.

Meade and Herb Fischer, rider of Head Play, were set down at Churchill Downs yesterday, each for 30 days for being guilty of grasping the equipment of the other during the Derby and Fischer an additional five days for striking Meade after the race.

Meade's suspension, while it does not apply to stake race engagements in Kentucky, bars the jockey from all Maryland tracks during the period, according to Matt Daiger, secretary of the Maryland Jockey Club.

Jimmy Smith, veteran Bradley rider, who rode Broker's Tip in all his four races last year, was mentioned as the most probable to take Meade's place.

Silas B. Mason, whose wife owns Head Play, is hunting for a rider for the horse which finished second in the Derby. Fischer was not brought East for the Preakness, so his suspension did not change the plans of the owner of Head Play for the Maryland classic.

Striking Caddies Reveal Demands

John Ritter and T. J. Kirkpatrick, spokesmen for the group of caddies who went on strike at the Churchill Valley Country Club Sunday, today said they had walked out because, when it was their turn to work, their numbers often were not called.

At the club, where new caddies were brought in and play proceeded as usual, it was said that the trouble was due to the club's refusal to meet demands of certain of the boys for an increase in the amount of the caddie fee.

GRAPHIC GOLF

BRASSIE PLAY

Inexperienced golfers rarely find brassie shots simple. Only occasionally do they find a real, good lie that lends itself well to easy contact with the clubface. In other instances the position of the ball may not be so perfect and it is not every golfer who can hit such shots with the assurance of Jerry Travers above.

A system followed by Walter Travis with considerable success was not to look at the ball but at a spot immediately behind it and then hit down with the idea of driving the sphere into the ground. Naturally this method is subject to modifications if an inclination is noted to hit the ground before the ball is struck.

In such cases it may require looking ahead, at times even past the center of the ball. The stroke is more upright than the drive, the player using an unhurried stroke and hitting the ball accurately. The loft of the clubface will make the ball rise aided by the motion of the hands as they whip up after the club's impact with the ball.

LOCAL DOUBLES PLAY OPENS TONIGHT

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Twenty-nine doubles teams will square off in special tournament feature of the annual Pittsburgh Tennis Association smoker and supper entertainment at the Pittsburgh Golf Club tonight. The competition will get under way at 5:30 o'clock and will run throughout this evening, with semi-final and final contests scheduled for tomorrow.

Weather permitting, the four P. G. C. outdoor courts will be used until dark to supplement the two covered rectangles for which the bulk of the play is listed.

Most of the leading racqueters of the district are slated for action in the impending event, though customary dual combinations have been entirely scrambled by the innovation of drawing partners as well as opponents by lot.

Pitt's Panthers left on their yearly Eastern trip this morning. The Blue and Gold lads encounter Navy tomorrow and Georgetown, Maryland, and George Washington on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, respectively.

Bill Thompson and his hustling Wash-Jeff adherents make their initial appearance of the season here by taking on Duquesne on the Bluff this afternoon. The Presidents have shown considerable strength in early matches and on record to date seem to hold a slight edge over the Hilltoppers.

The postponed Duquesne-Carnegie tilt wrecked by rain last Thursday has been set for the Skibo courts May 18, with the Bluff-Panther playoff at the Stadium one day later.

First round—W. J. Clardy and John Bosson vs. Dr. John W. Lauler and Joseph Dilworth; William Servick and C. J. Ramsburg, Jr., vs. H. M. Rinehart and H. L. McMath; Thomas Orr and Dr. Charles B. Walton vs. Charles A. Woods, Jr., and John D. Beatty; G. C. Burgwin, Jr., and Carlton E. Hughes vs. George D. Henderson and Rufus Hartig; Harmar D. Denny, Jr., and Dr. Eugene A. Conti vs. Don C. Snyder and Dr. David L. O'Loughlin; William P. Snyder, Jr., and J. Howard Moore vs. Thomas A. Robinson and William B. McKenna, Jr.; Robert T. Lampus and C. R. Austin vs. Frank S. Smith and Harry Wald; Howard Burgwin and Neal O. Rumsey vs. W. Russell Unger and Robert C. Meyers; Dr. John L. O'Loughlin and William McKenna vs. Austin Fazmaras and Dr. Charles H. Cochrane; George S. Kaufmann and Pennock Orr vs. Ben Bloom and R. H. Ellis; Roger Denney and Arthur J. Glaser vs. Charles Lockhart and Edwin M. Rhea; Karl Wolfe and Kingsley G. Moore vs. John R. Brown and Crosby Leyda; William R. Spiandler and L. M. Tichvinsky vs. R. J. Moore and Edwin McCloskey.

Bostwick Injured In Pimlico Spill

BALTIMORE, May 9.—(AP.)—The misfortunes that have dogged jockeys at Pimlico during the past week continued yesterday as G. H. (Pete) Bostwick, wealthy young gentleman jockey, received injuries when his mount slipped in the more after a jump in the Raceland steeplechase.

BARGAINS

There are bargains aplenty advertised these days—clothes, amusements, furniture, foods. Something catches your fancy; you reach for a telephone. A few brief words and the purchase is made. • A bargain, yes. But the greater bargain is the telephone itself. For less than 10 cents a day it helps you shop, runs errands, brings news, keeps you in touch with friends near and far. • More than a bargain—when emergencies arise the telephone then is priceless. Without delay it summons aid, saves property—even life!

You cannot measure the value of a telephone in your home by its small cost. One call may be worth more to you than the telephone's cost for a lifetime.

Finance Now Less Fearful Of Inflation

By B. C. FORBES

Mr. Forbes

THE FINANCIAL world interpreted President Roosevelt's radio talk favorably.

Visions of wild inflation are subsiding. The expectation grows that President Roosevelt will exercise his powers — powers beyond anything ever reposed in an American President — prudently.

INDUSTRY, WHILE entirely sympathetic with the idea of spreading work and shortening the work-week, feels that a legislative decree that no employe be allowed to work more than 30 hours a week, would cause much trouble. Relief is expressed over intimations that this piece of legislation will not be rushed through Congress.

HOPE RISES that Congress will do its duty promptly and adjourn very early—say, within a month.

Most employers are somewhat bewildered, even dazed, by the unprecedented multiplicity of unprecedentedly important legislative measures passed or proposed.

The widespread desire is to have uncertainty removed as speedily as possible, to have Congress adjourn, and to have industry given opportunity to adjust itself to the new rules, the new conditions.

Happily, the general disposition is to co-operate with the administration, to give its policies a fair trial, to strive to bring about recovery in trade, industry, employment.

THIS COLUMN continues to receive extraordinarily cheerful communications from manufacturers. So much guessing, so much speculating is being indulged in concerning what may or may not happen, nationally and internationally, that it is refreshing to receive definite, concrete facts and figures of an encouraging nature. Actualities, after all, contain more nourishment than prognostications. Samples follow:

Sales Manager R. M. W. Shaw, of Oldsmobile, wires:

"During the last 10 days of April Oldsmobile sold 1,627 cars, the best showing in two years. April's total sales of 3,776 were the largest in 21 months. Our first quarter average of 24.4 per cent of all cars in Oldsmobile's price class compares with 13.6 per cent a year ago, a showing that our dealers regard as remarkable."

PRESIDENT G. W. MASON, of Kelvinator, wires that shipments of 30,116 machines in April represented the biggest month in the company's whole 19 years' history, and an increase of 47 per cent over the April average for the last five years.

Unfilled orders mark the greatest accumulation of business ever recorded on the company's books. This month's production is running 40 per cent above last May, the previous high-record month.

PRESIDENT E. B. BIECHLER, of Frigidaire wires:

"May production will be the largest of any month since July, 1929. More than 7,500 men are at work in our two Dayton plants. Orders have piled up faster than we have been able to fill them.

"All orders are for immediate installation in homes, not for stocking of district warehouses and dealer showrooms. This indicates the enthusiasm with which householders are buying."

A WIRE from General Tire and Rubber, Akron, states:

"Production has gone to full capacity for the first time in over three years. We are

OIL PRODUCTION NEAR '29 TOP

TULSA, Okla., May 9.—(AP.)—With East Texas alone shooting past the 1,000,000 barrel mark, total United States crude oil production last week rose to within 73,000 barrels of the record output of late August, 1929, Oil and Gas Journal reports show.

Production was 2,902,539 barrels daily, an increase of 377,219 barrels over the 2,525,320 barrel level of the preceding week.

The week of August, 1929, with Oklahoma, California and West Texas rampant, production reached 2,975,435 barrels daily.

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 9.—(AP.)—Twenty-six oil companies, operating 218 wells in the Oklahoma City field, agreed tonight to offer no more crude oil for sale at the present 25-cents-a-barrel price.

J. Steve Anderson, oil operator who called the meeting, said the wrecking of the mid-continent market was due to a deluge of cheap oil from East Texas.

We are now working four six-hour shifts six days a week. Orders are still piling up."

OTHER MESSAGES record: Chevrolet's domestic shipments have each month this year exceeded last year's shipments. Output reached 208,000 by April 30 this year, compared with 188,000 last year.

Sales Manager W. F. Hufstader, of Buick:

"April's sales exceeded expectations, 4,786. Indications are that May will continue the upswing."

President Paul G. Hoffman, of Studebaker Sales Corporation:

Studebaker and Rockne passenger and commercial car orders on hand, 5,376, represent an increase of 88.7 per cent over March 31. Exports last month were the largest since March, 1930. Our South Bend plants are employing between 5,000 and 6,000. An aggressive sales and newspaper campaign is under way."

HIGHLY ENCOURAGING facts, aren't they?

COME IN FOR A DEMONSTRATION

Henry Ford
Dearborn, Mich.

May 9, 1933

A great thing has occurred amongst us. We have made a complete turn-around, and at last America's face is toward the future.

Three years---1929 to 1932---we Americans looked backward. All our old financial and political machinery was geared to pull us out of the depression by the same door through which we entered. We thought it simply a case of going back the way we came. It failed. We now realize that the way out is forward---through it.

Thanks for that belongs to President Roosevelt. Inauguration Day he turned the Ship of State around. Having observed the failure of sincere efforts to haul us back the way we came, he designed a new method---new political and financial machinery---to pull us out the way we are going---forward. He is clearing international obstacles out of the way; he does not stand in awe of tariffs. The people begin to feel that he does not take advice from the "interests"; that he has courage and loyalty to work for one supreme interest only---the welfare of the American people. That is a big achievement for two months in office.

And now we all look to what is coming; we grow less and less concerned with what is behind. We are looking for a hand-hold on the haul rope. Every man wants to do what he can, and all he can.

The best thing I can do for the Country is to create industry by building good motor cars. If I knew anything better to do, I would do it. Industry must be my contribution. Motor cars must face ahead to the future, like everything else. They are so much a part of the Nation's daily life that if they lag behind they hold the Country back.

STOCKS BRACE AS TRADING TURNS DULL

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP.)—The stock market was disinclined today to pursue the downward course which it took late in yesterday's trading.

The list was hesitant, with trading the dullest in a fortnight, but the trend turned upward as the day wore on, despite a sag in some of the commodities. Cotton got down about 50 cents a bale, before stiffening, and wheat lost about a cent. The dollar rallied in early foreign exchange dealings, then fell back again.

The lack of a good technical reaction during the past several weeks, made traders hesitant, and at the opening, some commission houses felt the declines of Saturday and late Monday night might carry somewhat further, but selling quickly dried up.

The action of the foreign exchange markets still attracted attention, in view of the rumors circulated in some speculative quarters yesterday that continental adherents to the gold standard might soon find their positions untenable. Gold currencies, however, notably the Dutch guilder and the French franc, met support after early setbacks, and rallied substantially. French bonds also acted better.

In any case, some important banking quarters were inclined to scoff at the tendency of floor traders to sell stocks every time the dollar advances, and buy stocks when the dollar declines.

United States Steel's monthly tonnage report, due tomorrow, was awaited with keen interest, and a substantial increase was expected, the first since October. The industry is currently much encouraged by the increase in specifications against contracts. It was felt a few weeks ago that much of the business on the books might be canceled.

Coppers were helped by reports that the industry might reach a voluntary agreement to set aside their huge surplus of metal above ground to restore profitable price levels. Copper futures were firm in the London market.

COTTON RALLIES FROM LOW

NEW YORK, May 9.—Cotton futures opened steady, 16-22 points decline under liquidation in response to lower Liverpool cables and on the decline in foreign exchange. May, 8.06; July, 8.25; October, 8.40; December, 8.60; January, 8.69; March, 8.87.

Realizing or liquidation was active at the start with July selling off to 8.18 or about 52 point below the recent high. The general list showed net losses of 19 to 26 points.

This decline seemed to attract a renewal of Wall street and commission house demand, and there was also some buying by trade interests believed to be for mill account. This was sufficient to cause rallies from the lowest with the market ruling about 6 to 10 points net lower at the end of the first half hour.

The market held fairly steady later in the morning with trading moderately active. Buying from the trade and commission house sources was less aggressive than recently and some reactionary sentiment was reported on the suggestion that the inflation factor might have been discounted for the time being. Offerings were readily absorbed, however, and at midday July was ruling around 8.35 and December 8.75 or 15 to 17 points up from the lows of the morning and 5 to 7 points net lower.

LIVERPOOL, May 9.—Cotton, 6,000 bales, including 3,400 American. Spot in fair demand; prices 14 points lower; quotations in pence: American strict good middling, 6.62; good middling, 6.32; strict middling, 6.02; middling, 5.87; strict low middling, 5.72; low middling, 5.52; strict good ordinary, 5.32; good ordinary, 5.02. Futures closed steady. May, 5.63; July, 5.60; October, 5.59; December, 5.61; January, 5.62; March, 5.66.

St. Paul Asks O. K. On $10,500,000 Bonds

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The St. Paul Railroad has asked the Interstate Commerce Commission permission to issue $10,500,000 first and refunding mortgage six per cent series A and to pledge them as collateral for loans from the R. F. C. The road has already asked the R. F. C. for loan of $9,000,000.

Goodyear Rubber Restores Salaries

AKRON, May 9.—Effective today, salaried employes in the general offices of Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company are placed on a basis of five eight-hour days per week, thereby restoring the 12½ per cent salary reduction instituted at the inception of the curtailed working period.

Whitney Re-elected Exchange President

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP.)—Richard Whitney has been re-elected president of the New York Stock Exchange for a fourth term. Warren B. Nash, treasurer of the exchange since 1919, was also re-elected.

British Employment Conditions Improve

LONDON, May 9.—Registered unemployment in Great Britain on April 24 was 2,697,634, against 2,776,184 on March 20 and 2,652,181 on April 15, 1932.

MONEY QUERIES ANSWERED BY ECONOMIST

By LEWIS RANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Several readers have asked questions about money and exchange, which I try to answer below.

The value of money is its purchasing power. Of course, if the purchasing power of a dollar is reduced, one has to pay more dollars for the things one buys. That is the same as saying that prices are higher.

METHODS TOLD

Money may be made less valuable in several ways. Broadly speaking, the thing may be done by greatly increasing the quantity of money or by lowering the quality of money. If we double the number of dollars, the increased supply can't be used unless we pay more of them. If we decrease the security back of the dollar, it will not be considered worth as much.

The surest way to inflate currency, and therefore prices, is to do something to money which lowers its quality. Thus the quantity of gold required to be held as security for paper dollars may be decreased, or the amount of gold in the standard gold dollar may be reduced, or both.

Such acts tend to make people doubt the value of the dollar. If the doubts are strong enough, people may try to turn their dollars into commodities or stocks, on the theory that they can buy more now than later.

CHEAPER DOLLAR

A cheaper dollar is one which will not buy as much of various commodities as formely. It is not worth as much. You have to give more of them when you buy things.

Of course, if dollars actually become cheaper, a given number of dollars will buy less than before. So salaries, wages, bank deposits, etc., are also "cheaper." That is, unless you get more dollars, the cheaper the dollar the less your purchasing power.

GOLD STANDARD EFFECT

3—What is the effect on the United States currency of our going off the gold standard?

It means that the paper dollar is no longer redeemable in gold. When we were on the gold standard, we could count on getting a standard gold dollar (containing 23.22 grains of pure gold) for each paper dollar, if we wanted to. But now this is not the case.

Our paper money is now practically the notes, or promises to pay, of the government. Their value depends on the solvency and integrity of the government, just as your check depends upon your solvency and integrity. But more that that, we don't know what substance, or how much of it, the government will pay us if we try to "cash in" the notes.

The foreign exchange rate is the number of dollars we have to give for the standard money unit of some foreign country. If sterling exchange is at $4, we have to pay $4 if we want one "pound." When French francs are 4 cents it means that we get 25 francs for $1.

If we sell England more things than she sells us, Englishmen have to settle the difference which they owe us on the trade. That causes a demand for dollar exchange, and tends to put dollars up in comparison with "pounds."

If the dollar rises enough to make it pay to ship gold, Englishmen will send gold to settle the balance they owe.

Or if we inflate and reduce the value of the dollar, while the pound remains unchanged in its value, people will hurry to change dollars into pounds. A little while ago the dollar was worth so much that it only took $3.20 to get a pound. Now it takes above $4 to get a pound. People who bought pounds for $3.20 can now sell them for $4.

PENNA. CRUDE CUT 20c

Pennsylvania grade crude oil has been reduced 20 cents per barrel to the lowest prices in the past 35 years. Oil in Southwest Pennsylvania pipe lines companies lines is now quoted at 97 cents, in Eureka pipe lines 92c, and in Buckeye pipe lines 77c a barrel.

Bradford district oil in National Transit and Tidewater Pipe Line, Ltd., lines also has been cut 20 cents a barrel to $1.27.

Corning grade crude oil has been reduced to 50 cents per barrel from 70 cents.

FINDLAY, O., May 9.—Ohio Oil Company announced a cut of 15 cents in the following grades of crude oil: Lima now 55c; Indiana, 25c; Illinois, 47c; Princeton, 47c; Western Kentucky, 42c. Big Muddy in Wyoming was cut from 50c to 25c. Wooster grade crude was cut yesterday from 70c to 50c.

BUSINESS

Steel Output Nears Critical Level For Profits

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

STEEL PRODUCTION has spurted to 33 per cent of capacity. There still are prospects for further expansion in output.

The passing of the 30 per cent level was particularly significant for stockholders in steel companies. Operations between the 30 per cent and 40 per cent level mark the critical point between profits and losses for a large share of the leading steel companies.

Many factors influence the rate of operations which will permit the showing of profits in the steel industry. The type of material being rolled and the price concessions which have been made are among the important elements to be taken into consideration.

Officials of several steel corporations, however, have declared that their organizations will be able to make money at operating levels between 30 per cent and 40 per cent. The current spurt in production has reached or is approaching the critical point for many steel companies.

* * *

Quarter Reports Will Reflect Improvement

IN ANTICIPATING the results of the steel companies for the second quarter of the year, several factors must be taken into consideration.

First of all, while operations were expanding during April, they did not reach levels which might permit profits until the second week of May.

Second, the duration of the current boom in steel operations is subject to wide diversity of opinion.

If the expansion in operations continues, at least some of the steel companies now showing losses should be able to report small profits for the second quarter. It is quite obvious that losses in most cases will be reduced in comparison to the first quarter, even if the recovery does not continue.

* * *

Economies About To Show Influence

THE ECONOMIES which have been put into effect by the steel companies during the past three years have not had a chance to make themselves shown in the income accounts up to the present time. The volume of sales has been declining so rapidly that savings have been immediately overshadowed.

But these savings will be readily apparent in the future. When business was on the decline, most steel companies started to show losses when production dropped below 50 per cent of capacity. Many of them fell into the red even earlier. If profits start to be shown when the upturn in business crosses the area between 30 and 40 per cent, the effect of the economies will be quite obvious.

The Flapper's Daughter

By BEATRICE BURTON

THRILLING NOVEL OF THE CHILDREN OF DANCING MOTHERS

To begin with, she was not very deeply in love with Mr. Collins any more. The glamour that belongs to all rich men had gone from him, and with it most of her feeling of hero-worship for him had gone. He was no longer the "Big Boss" in her mind. He was a man, with some money and some property, planning to go away and start life over again—a man who liked the boring things that her father and his friends had always liked. Poker and beer and cheese and loud laughter in a smoke-filled room.

And then, she was not at all certain that he was really in love with her. There was no getting around the fact that she had done most of the pursuing in her love affair with him . . . Putting herself in his way at the office, telephoning him, inviting him to the flat. If she married she would want to be sure that her husband was madly in love with her. She remembered a phrase from some book or other that she had read—"hot-blooded marriage or none at all." That was the right idea.

"Please let me think all this over until tomorrow," she had said to Mr. Collins when she left him that night. "It comes as such a surprise."

But it had not come as a surprise. Far from it. For months she had worked for his proposal of marriage and now that she had it she wasn't quite certain that she wanted it.

THINKS OF THE WEST

She wakened to a typical Sunday in the flat. Gray skies out-of-doors and indoors all the warmth and untidy cheerfulness that Dodie knew so well how to create. The radio going in the living room, the percolator and toaster on the dining room table beside a plate of sliced bread and a bowl of butter, so that everybody could prepare his own breakfast when he got up. The living room a sea of Sunday newspapers, and Dodie mending a pair of stockings in the flowered cretonne armchair before the gas logs.

Sharlie's father and Edna were having breakfast when Sharlie sat down at the table, Edna crisp and clean in one of her dark blue crepe house-dresses, Eldon Dunn frowning down at the automatic toaster as it popped two browned pieces of toast out and turned itself off.

"I often wonder," he said as sudden rain dashed against the panes of the dining room windows, "why my ancestors didn't settle in the west or the south of this country when they came here—any place but in this climate. My bones have ached with cold for a month, and the Winter isn't even started."

Sharlie thought of the part of the west that Mr. Collins had told her about the night before. The Salt River Valley with its acres of cotton and melons and lettuce, its groves of fruit trees, its hot dry climate.

TELLS FAMILY

"One of your descendants may go down to the southwest to live," she said, pouring herself a cup of coffee. "I may. I may go down to Arizona after the first of the year."

On her side of the table Edna laid down a section of the morning paper with a sharp rustle and stared at her. There came the sound of a chair being pushed back from the hearth in the living room and Dodie came hurrying in, her pink cashmere kimono trailing behind her.

"What's this I'm hearing?" she asked. From the folds of her clothes came the scent of the perfume and powder that she used. She hadn't used them for a long time. Not since the night when Sharlie's father came home after the weeks of his separation from her. But now that Mr. Collins was coming to the flat to see Sharlie—"and might drop in any minute," as she had said several times during the past two days, she seemed to be taking a new interest in herself. Once more she was the well-groomed Dodie of the old days, but with a difference. She no longer put on too much make-up or too much of the perfume and powder. She was simply Sharlie's lovely and attractive young mother, playing her part for the eyes of Mr. Collins. Playing second-lead for the first time in her life. Yielding the spotlight to Sharlie!

"Darling," she said to Sharlie now, dropping down on a chair beside her, "just what do you mean?"

"That I'm going to marry Mr. Collins—I guess." Sharlie's eyes were on Edna's face as she answered her mother. "He wants me to, anyhow, and go down to Phoenix to live."

INQUIRES ABOUT MONEY

It seemed to her that Edna's skin, always so white except for the real color that came and went in her cheeks, became whiter as she listened.

"Edna, you were right about him," she went on, leaning forward on the table. "The Collins Company is going to close between Christmas and New Years."

Edna said nothing. She didn't move. Just sat there looking back at her.

"Well, what about him? What about Mr. Collins?"—Sharlie's mother asked sharply. "He's all right, isn't he? He isn't 'broke,' as Edna said he was, is he?"

Sharlie frowned trying to remember just what Mr. Collins had told her about his own financial status. "Let us see—I think he said that he had some property down there, and that he was going into the real estate business. Or was it the insurance business?—I ought to remember, but I don't. I got the impression that he'd lost a lot of money."

Dodie's yellow head—not so yellow and not so smooth and shining as it had been a few months ago—turned jerkily toward Eldon Dunn. "You'd better talk things over with him a bit—try to find out just what he has before Sharlie commits herself," she said to him with a certain grimness. "I don't see us letting Sharlie go 'way down there, almost on the Mexican border, to live in an adobe hut or a three-room cottage while Mr. Collins tries to make enough for them to live on.

EDNA QUESTIONED

"I think perhaps I'd better talk to him, instead of you. I can do it, so that he won't realize that I'm poking my nose into his business. After all, it's my duty to do it. Sharlie's my daughter, and if I don't look after her I'm a pretty poor mother. Edna, you're Mr. Collins' secretary. You must know all about him. Why don't you be frank for once in your life, and tell us how things are with Mr. Collins?"

"I've told you everything that I can—I told you as much as I could the other morning," said Edna. Under the blue-black widow's peak of hair that came down on her forehead in a little arrow, her face looked tired and colorless now. "It's true that Mr. Collins has a great deal of land down in Arizona. It's not very close to Phoenix. He's been holding it for years, and he's been intending to hold it for a long time until Phoenix grows out toward it. It's valuable land, of course, but it won't be really valuable until the Boulder Dam is finished."

"The Boulder Dam——" repeated Dodie in the tone of a person who had never heard of the Boulder Dam and who wondered what it had to do with the subject under discussion. "Well, when will it be finished?"

"Not for several years," Edna answered flatly, coolly.

Dodie went on frowning at her in a puzzled sort of way for a minute or two. Then she seemed to brush the Boulder Dam aside with a wave of her small, plump hand. "All that, of course, is just business," she said. "The thing we are all interested in is finding out just where Mr. Collins stands right now. I want Sharlie to have the right kind of home, the right kind of background. Otherwise there is no use in her rushing into marriage in a few weeks. She'd do better to wait and see how Mr. Collins gets along down there."

DODIE'S DECISION

She got up from the table and moved across the room toward the telephone in the little hall. "It won't do any harm to ask him over for dinner this noon," she threw back at them all over her shoulder. "Sharlie can tell him that she's going to wait here for a few months until he's gotten his bearings down where he's going—and in the meantime we'll see what kind of ring he gives her, and find out what sort of home he expects to provide for her, and so on."

At the door she stopped for a moment, and turned facing them. "I made up my mind to one thing long ago," she said firmly, her lips clipping off the words, "and that is that I'm not going to let Sharlie want for things all her married life! I'm not going to let her live in a box of a home, spending her whole life among the pots and pans if I can help it! If this man has lost his money my advice to her is to let him go to Arizona and forget him! Look around for somebody else!"

She shot an accusing look at Eldon Dunn as she talked about the pots and pans, and everyone in the room knew that she was telling him that she was not going to let Sharlie live the kind of life that she had lived if she could help it. Under that look Sharlie's father seemed to shrink a little. He looked into his empty coffee cup for a few seconds and then, as Dodie's voice came to them giving Mr. Collins' telephone number, he looked across the table at his daughter.

"Sharlie," he said, "how do you feel about this man?"

WALDEMAR ATTERDAG SACKS VISBY (World's History.)

Waldemar, a Danish king, looked jealously upon the riches of the Hansa merchants. In 1361 he collected a fleet, sailed to Gotland and assailed Visby, a flourishing Hansa town. Hansa was a trade union established in the thirteenth century by the North German traders against marauders and pirates. (Nash: Hansa.)

COMPARISON OF BURNERS

In the Fisher burner, the gas is supplied with a great quantity of air; a grid on the top prevents the flame "striking back." There is a solid cone of practically perfect burning.

COMPARISON OF TAXES FOR RAILROADS AND VEHICLES

The National Transportation Committee used this chart as one reason for their statement that automotive transportation is here to stay; that it is an advance in the march of progress, and that restrictions cannot be invented for the benefit of the railroads. (Problems of Democracy.)

OIL-ELECTRIC RAIL CAR

THE TIDAL THEORY (Science)

This theory, propounded by Sir James Jeans concerning the birth of celestial bodies, sets forth that a star passed near the sun and drew (by gravitation) a cigar-shaped filament of gas from the sun. From broken-away parts of this nebular cigar were formed the celestial bodies of the solar system. The number of satellites is indicated under each planet. (For La Place's nebular theory see our issue of February 2, 1933.) (Jeans: Universe Around Us.)

Just Between Girls

Legally It Ain't So

Beg to report that the malt crop of early spring brew is non-intoxicating in fact and alcoholic in fancy.

Manhattan proudly boasts there have been no forcible detentions for dipsomania or its concomitant ailments. No single citizen has broken through the parenthesis of sobriety. Law and order are still in brackets.

HOWEVER: Which is always a dangerous word, there have been some few incidents of eccentric behavior probably superinduced by an over-rich mixture of Oolong, Ceylon and Mocha.

Last Tuesday, Elliker Ambrugg asked municipal permission to park a bass cello within 30 feet of a fireplug while he mailed out some delayed New Year cards. Moon madness.

Just yesterday, Mintrose Traffie walked down the main stem on his hands which were neatly gloved in firemen's boots. Mintrose explained that he always felt lonely between eclipses of the sun. Just ginger ale with intent to defraud the insurance companies.

William Lahoof, of Seventh avenue, made a speech after kicking up a three-yard divot on the city golf course. Willie thought he was breaking ground for a new postoffice. He then tried to crawl into the golf bag under the impression that it was a sleeping bag and he was an Eskimo. Round even. Cocoa.

Our chief probation officer discovered a gentleman sleeping neatly in a Central Park rose bush. He was neither a flower nor a bud. He was using the rim of his derby for a collar. Which is certainly too far south for headgear to thrive. Soda water through a bent straw was the underlying motif of the light opera.

While seeking to shave strangers with an empty sardine can held lightly between his teeth, Mr. Eddie Cobbidge stated that there was no use growing a beard when George Bernard Shaw had a 70-year start on the world. Eddie was in splendid shape except that his feet didn't track. Just an overdose of herbs, roots and berries.

And Joe Doax danced 1,500 exciting laps around a lamppost, having elected himself queen of the next May while waiting for the garlands and the ribbons to be telegraphed by an incognito admirer. Joe attracted quite a crowd which converted the contest into an Australian pursuit race. Joe didn't finish in the money when his fears failed to mesh. Pie a la mode should always be kept under lock and key.

The Mayoralty Campaign

The Opinions of the Citizens' Committee and the League of Women Voters Deserve Respect,

The Citizens' Committee and the League of Women Voters have joined in the formation of the Citizens' League of Allegheny County, and invite citizens "who are opposed to the present gang rule and are in favor of an honest and efficient administration of public affairs" to join and take an active part in its work.

The Citizens' Committee and the League of Women Voters rendered important service to Pittsburgh in helping to uncover the corruption in the Kline administration. It was disinterested, unselfish service. There was no motive for the activities of the two organizations, so far as we know, beyond a desire to give the city good government.

Some pretty sharp things are said about Mayor John S. Herron and Senator James J. Coyne in the statement announcing the formation of the new league. Herron is spoken of as "the man who as president of Council and head of the Kline majority bitterly fought every effort made to disclose corruption and graft in city affairs." Coyne is said to have shown by his recent actions at Harrisburg "utter disregard of the wishes of the people."

The truth of these characterizations is undeniable, and the opinions of the organization that presents them are entitled to respect.

The Chamber Election

Candidates Could Win Acclaim by Denouncing the Body's Anti-Social Policies

The Chamber of Commerce will elect new directors Thursday, and a spirited campaign is being conducted.

One of the candidates pledges himself, if elected, to combat "all those negative and selfish influences with which every big American city has to contend in fighting for its advancement."

"Those negative and selfish influences" have been conspicuous in the policies of the Chamber itself under recent administrations. We have had an ugly example of it lately in the Chamber's opposition to the proposal that the people of Pennsylvania be allowed to vote on a constitutional amendment authorizing old age pensions.

Several years ago we had a flagrant example of it in the revelation that the Chamber had sought by underhand methods to destroy the United Mine Workers of America.

The Chamber has not been found fighting sweatshops, child labor, starvation wages, excessive hours of labor. When proposals have been made for the betterment of workers, and the improvement of the condition of the poor and lowly, the Chamber, if not neutral, has generally been against them.

If someone, among the candidates for director, had the courage and the vision to run on a platform repudiating the anti-social attitude of the Chamber in the past, and insisting that it stay out of factional politics, it would be a pleasant relief.

Even if not elected by this corporation-controlled body, such a candidate would win the acclaim of the rank and file of the taxpayers.

Organizing for Recovery

Regulation of Industry to Prevent Over-Production Is to be Welcomed

The emergence of the country from the existing economic depression should not be retarded by man-made obstacles, such as the inflexible anti-trust laws.

If big business is to be relieved of the trade destroying shackles, however, it is important that its operations be supervised by the government for the protection of labor and of consumers.

It is good news, therefore, that the "new deal" administration is drafting a so-called "national industry recovery act," which embodies several basic policies long advocated by the Hearst newspapers. These include modification of the anti-trust laws and the setting up of a peace time war industries board.

The effect of such policies would substitute reason and intelligent planning for blind and anarchic drifting in the realm of business.

The objective would be to establish and maintain economic balance under which the maximum exchange of goods and services might be accomplished.

The real aim of the proposed legislation would be to end the era of bungling, which has robbed the people of the rich potential fruits of the new productivity of industry.

It is reported that the proposed "balance wheel"—the peace time industries board—would consist of the Secretaries of Commerce and of Labor, and of five other members, including spokesmen for commerce, finance, labor, agriculture, and the public.

The tentative plan approves the formation of industrial and trade associations which shall cooperate with the national board to correlate production with consumption, establish minimum prices at fair levels, and stabilize markets.

The effectiveness of such a proposal as a means of breaking the backbone of the depression would be heightened if on the recommendation of the board funds were loaned to industry for job creating purposes through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

If operated simultaneously with a job giving public works program, and the agricultural and monetary relief measures, this drive on unemployment and profitless business should have sufficient leverage to reverse underlying economic trends.

The improved public psychology heightens the prospects of success of the rapidly unfolding economic plan.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Marrying Girls and Others

Marriage makes a man keep his eyes off other women—and makes a woman keep her eyes ON other women.

* * *

Men have become so marriage-shy, that about the only chance a girl gets to say "NO" to a man, these days, is when he comes to the door and tries to sell her a brush.

* * *

Th biggest question for a marrying girl to decide is whether she wants the kind of a husband who exclaims, "Migosh, it's late!" when the clock points to 10:30, or the kind who carols, "Oh, the night's young, yet!" when it points to midnight.

One of the delusions with which a middle-aged Lothario kids himself is that it will keep him feeling younger to be a young girl's "Daddy," than to be an old girl's "Prince Charming."

* * *

This is the time of year when a man has to make the harrowing choice between young onions and young love. But when it comes to a struggle between his gustatory appetites and his romantic yearnings it's always safe to slip a scallion into the salad.

* * *

Sometimes a modern girl decides to remain a spinster for a few years longer because she prefers the irregular presence of a lover to the regular absence of a husband.

Marriage used to be the period at the end of courtship days; now it is merely the dash between divorces. Many a girl wonders, while she is making the frillies for her hope chest, what the well-dressed grass-widow will be wearing next season.

* * *

The hard-boiled bachelor, who tries to convince a girl that marriage is "all a mistake," is always secretly glad that none of his ancestors were that broad-minded.

* * *

Divorce is the silly notion that life is a merry-go-round and there'll always be another ring for another trip.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 9.—Few who live by the pen remember numbers. And I've never known a scribbler to be anything but a dullard at arithmetic. Although my sister's address in Kansas City, Mo., has been the same for 15 years, and I have written her an average of three times a week, there's constant confusion.

As long as I keep within a ten-block range, mail men find her, but about every six months she notifies my wife: "He's getting out of bounds again." George D. Buckley, to whom I pass along ribald yarns as they come to me, has reached a point of utter exasperation over my derelictions.

A cryptic note from his secretary this morning reads: "Mr. Buckley desires in the future you address all communications to him in care of the Obelisk in Central Park." This causticity was inspired by a screed from me to go to 154 East Sixty-second being directed to 431 West Sixteenth street.

Irvin Cobb is another figure falterer. Rupert Hughes keeps his home telephone number pasted in his hat. Will Irwin secretes his in his vest pocket. It was proverbial Mark Twain had to carry a telephone book to the phone with an index finger pointing to the number desired.

* * *

Louis Seibold, deservedly great political correspondent, once received word from his mother his Great-Aunt Mary was at the old Waldorf and to call immediately. He spruced up and went around. At the reception desk he discovered he had forgotten her last name. He inquired tactfully if there might be a lady from Virginia who looked like a Great-Aunt Mary. It seems there were about 20. In desperation he sent a telegram asking for the last name. He waited at the desk until he received this reply: "Your great-aunt's name is Fleming. Yours is Seibold. Your sorrowing Mother."

* * *

Speaking of aunts, there was a character our town knew as Aunt Puss. She was very deaf. One evening Dr. Johnson, the village physician, was driving by her frame dwelling on the edge of the town. He saw a puff of smoke and shingles curling on the roof. "Your house is on fire!" he yelled. In flat monotone of the deaf she looked up from her porch rocker and smiled: "Won't you come in?" He screamed again the house was ablaze and sweetly she murmured: "Oh, yes. Is that all?" He scratched his head in perplexion and snorted: "That's all I can think of." And giddaped furiously to his horse.

* * *

There was also a garrulous maiden lady in our town vilayet named Miss Mattie Boone. One of her proud boasts was she descended from Daniel Boone. The acid-tongued Dr. Johnson, hearing of it, observed: "She descended from a Boone, all right. But Bab, not Dan."

* * *

Charlie Judels, character actor, was called to a radio office recently to bolster a program of one of the stars. After an audition he was told he fitted in perfectly and to appear next morning. He judiciously inquired what he was to be paid. He was told $25 and shook his head. The ante was lifted to $50. Said Judels: "I live in Nutley, N. J. I'd like to send my car for you to have dinner with me tonight and I'll pay you $50 to entertain me while we dine."

* * *

They were discussing one of the dullest newspapers on the Atlantic seaboard. "If it is true to tradition," observed Lucius Beebe, "tomorrow it will be printing the second-day stories of the Titanic survivors."

* * *

Next to discussions of newspapering nothing interests me more than the topic of food. Bruce Barton flowered into a panegyric for Virginia ham, redolent of hickory smoke, and Floyd Gibbons waxed verbose over the acrid tang of marinierte herring. When Bob Reud dwelt on the imperial succulence of fried cut chicken I could stand it no longer and began to brood. And taking off for dinner at home I was gripped by the pricking qualm that I'd find the kitchen stove broken down or something.

Dick Prior brought his newly-acquired and enormous Great Dane from England to call this evening. My two fraidies got one look, uttered despairing howls and vanished. So the amiable animal made an affectionate lunge for me, licking my face, neck and hair with repeated swipes of his tongue. I kept thinking of the day I fell in the watering trough.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Most of my life I've spent making mistakes, or rassling with their consequences. And I have discovered that there are two Laws governing blunders which, if you've the sense of a tick, you'd better observe. The first is:

DON'T LIE ABOUT A MISTAKE—PARTICULARLY TO YOURSELF.

This, obviously, sounds like mighty inconvenient advice. For, as everyone knows, a nice, neat exposure-proof Lie is the first thing any normal person craves when he's pulled a boner. Fool 'em! Cover up the trail! That's his first impulse. Invent a speedy alibi, to keep away prying eyes and preaching tongues.

And, even more pressing than the urge to fool the other fellow, comes the desire to fix things jake with oneself. For how can one endure this wound to one's vanity; this blow at one's self-confidence? And so one doesn't endure it. Instantly, out come the good old excuses, evasions, rationalizations. And before your conscience can start to prickle, you've convinced yourself that it wasn't YOUR mistake at all. No, indeedy! YOUR motives were 100 per cent noble. Someone else was to blame for the whole sorry mess.

And the weird part of it is, you actually believe it! Amazing creatures, we human aimals! No matter what we've done—no matter how plain the evidence against us—WE CAN ALWAYS PERSUADE OURSELVES WE'RE INNOCENT!

IF YOU RUN FROM IT—LIE TO YOURSELF ABOUT THE WEAKNESS IN YOURSELF WHICH CAUSED IT—THEN THAT WEAKNESS WILL KEEP ON GRIPPING YOU EVERLASTINGLY.

So, unless you want to keep yourself on a hot-spot all your life, DON'T LIE TO YOURSELF WHEN YOU'VE PULLED A DUMB ONE. Pull the pretty palaver if you must to the curious public—but in the secrecy of your own soul, take it on the chin!

That's the first Law governing mistakes. And the second is:

Having recognized your mistake, having acknowledged your weakness, GET BUSY ON NEW AND BETTER EXPERIMENTS. DON'T LINGER OVER YOUR SPOILED YESTERDAYS!

Remorse is popularly supposed to be a virtue; but I am convinced that no virtue more easily becomes a vice—and a handy alibi for endless laziness, selfishness, cowardice and soggy exhibitionism.

Why try for fresh laurels when you can get a big hand by telling of all the Cain you've raised? Why face today's cruel competition, when you can cash in on yesterday's bad record? As, of course, you can. For who dare turn away a Real, Noisy Regretter?

And what a pest he is! There's no more deadly bore than the human who's asking a Profitable Racket of his Bad Past. Give him a chance to utter his first bleat, and he'll strut his remorse all over the premises. As a stunt for grabbing spotlights, Regret has any vaudeville turn backed off the boards.

SO IF YOU'RE REALLY SORRY FOR THE MESS YOU'VE MADE—AND IF YOU REALLY WANT TO QUALIFY AS REGULAR—DON'T LINGER OVER YOUR MISTAKES UNTIL YOU MAKE A RACKET OF THEM.

Give them the once-over, accompanied by a healthy kick on your spiritual shin—THEN CUT OUT THE GLOOMY GULPS AND GET GOING!

Text for Today And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son.—John, xiv: 13.

Mother and Daughter

WHICH IS MOTHER, WHICH IS DAUGHTER?

In these pictures you see Lady Howe and her daughter, Lady Georgiana Curzon.

The English like to have names different from those of their father and mother. This shows that there are titles stored away in the family history. They are brought out to equip the children. Thus Queen Mary and King George have their oldest son with "Prince of Wales" for his title. They have another son, "Duke of York," and their oldest girl is "The Princess Royal."

Americans get along fairly well with George, John, Mary and Annie, although some of them feel a little better when they can add "Second" or "Third" to their name. This in some mysterious way is supposed to indicate aristocracy.

These pictures are published to emphasize the encouraging fact that age and youth are closer together than they used to be. The lady on the right as you perceive, because of the great youthfulness of her daughter on the left, is the mother. She looks perhaps five or 10 years older than the daughter—not more. If the daughter were not there, you could not guess the mother's age, within many years.

There was a time when this youthful mother, undoubtedly in the neighborhood of 40, would have been expected to wear a nice little cap of white lace and lean back comfortably knitting.

No comfortable knitting for the modern mother of this age. She is comfortably supervising the shaking of the cocktails, or perhaps "drinking her third," although this lady probably owes her youthful appearance to the fact that she takes none at all.

Fifty years ago this mother would have sat in one corner of the drawing room, engaged in some household occupation occasionally saying, "Now, now, children." Now she is dancing the rhumba, watching the races, driving her high powered car, or even her airplane.

Old age is conquered with the aid of common sense, wise diet and the beauty parlor.

FREE VERSE

By Winifred Black

The lady who writes free verse was having a beautiful time. She was making fun of Tennyson and Swinburne, and as for the rollicking Rudyard—what a crass vulgarian. What a boasting, bragging, strutting fellow—dead now, hopelessly dead, all the Kipling stuff. As dead as Homer and Dante, and the rest of the queer old fellows.

And as for those more recent versefiers, oh they were simply too funny for words.

Take that ridiculous thing about a tree for instance. You know that mushy bit of jingle:

"I think that I shall never see

"If I have to hear that mawkish thing again I'll scream," she said. "Some fool of a tenor, or some elderly maiden lady, stands up by the piano and moons about the tree, like a mourning dove in the mountains, and you're all expected to put your head on one side and murmur: 'Exquisite. Charming. How tender.' It really makes me almost seasick.

"A nest of robins in her hair! Trees don't have hair, they have leaves.

"'I think that I have never knowed

"Every time somebody sings 'The Tree,' or raves about Joyce Killmer I make some excuse, not too soon of course, that would be too pointed, but as soon as I can, and say the toad thing. It's really lovely, don't you know.

"Those mushy, sentimental things have to be laughed out of existence.

And we all looked intense and cynical at the same time and that, mind you, is rather a hard thing to do.

On the way home in the cab, I noticed an odd little sound. It turned out to be the man who was taking me home.

"What are you singing?" said I to the man.

"'I think that I shall never see'," said the man, and he sang it right through from beginning to the end. Joyce Killmer's lovely thing about the tree.

And do you know it's been running in my head ever since, and I simply can't remember one word of the free verse the lady has written.

Now isn't that odd?
